Grad to be aboard

They call it "graduation" and it's all in fun. But to the children who are leaving the Fairfield Day Care Centre some after two years — it's an important occasion. Off on an imaginary cruise to higher education in this landbound boat Wednesday are (clockwise from front): Rebecca Coss, Brad Duggan, Angie Turford, Maryanne Clark, Miko Bruce. The "diplomas" they are clutching include one letter telling them how great they are and another telling teachers in the "big school" (elementary) what to expect next week.

U.S. skipper sought in 'abduction'

Fisheries official had to jump

Canadian Press

Police on both sides of the Canada-United States border were searching Wednesday for the captain of a U.S. seiner after a Canadian fisheries officer said he was abducted in an incident on Juan de Fuca Strait last week.

RCMP Sgt. Ed Kokoska said the FBI had been called in to assist in the search because Canadian efforts to locate the seiner, the Lucky Star, had failed.

Kokoska said the fishboat, although registered at Kodiak, Alaska, was believed to be somewhere in Washington state waters.

He said the captain was wanted for questioning in connection with an incident Aug. 24 when the fisheries patrol boat Laurier caught an American seiner allegedly fishing in Canadian waters off Port Renfrew, about 50 miles west of here.

Kokoska said Laurier quartermaster Butch Mayo prepared to board the seiner to place the captain under arrest and escort the vessel into port. But just prior to Mayo's boarding, the seiner and the Laurier were involved in a collision.

Fisheries officials said the collision occurred when Laurier captain Jack Goss positioned his vessel in front of the bow of the seiner to prevent it from escaping.

Some damage was done to the seiner along its port bulwarks but the Laurier was unharmed and Mayo boarded the vessel.

The fisheries spokesman said the captain of the seiner warned Mayo that once he came aboard, all he would get is a one-way trip to the U.S.

The spokesman said the seiner then hauled its nets and "sort of jogged towards the boundary."

When it crossed the border, the spokesman said Goss sent out a rubber lifeboat to retrieve Mayo.

But the seiner refused to stop when the lifeboat pulled alongside, and Mayo had to jump while both boats were moving.

Kokoska said charges were contemplated against the captain.

Mike Entler, FBI special agent, said Tuesday in Seattle that the bureau would help the RCMP, even though no U.S. laws were broken.

Fraser murders suspect charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP said Wednesday they had charged a 23-year-old Chilliwack man with four counts of first degree murder in the July 18 shooting of four Agassiz-area teenagers on Ferry Island in the Fraser River.

Inspector Les Homes told a news conference that Walter Murray Madsen was charged in Chilliwack after being arrested Tuesday without a struggle at his home.

In Chilliwack, Madsen stood silently in provincial court as he was charged with the murder of Evert Den Hertog, 19, of Rosedale, his brother John, 16, and Clearbrook teenagers Bert Menger, 19, and Leola Guliker, 16.

The four were drinking beer in a small recreation area by the Fraser River, 70 miles east of Vancouver, when a man came out of the woods with a rifle and opened fire. Only Ed Menger, 15, escaped to alert police.

Madsen was remanded to Friday in custody and without plea to give him an opportunity to retain counsel. Observers said the accused is about six feet tall with short, light-colored hair.

Homes said police had no theories as to a motive for the shootings and said he was not aware that Madsen had any criminal record.

The search for the suspect was one of the largest in Lower Mainland history, but led to scores of dead ends despite the hundreds of tips provided to police by the public. Police said at one point they had investigated and eliminated 200 suspects.

Ed Menger told police the gunman levelled his weapon and fired a shot. Menger said he jumped up and fled, but heard more shots behind him as he ran.

When he reached the highway, he flagged down a passing car and called police from the nearest farmhouse. Police who rushed to the scene found no sign of the four other youths, but noted that their

Victoria Shamrocks' hopes of their first chance since 1957 to represent the Western Lacrosse Association in the Mann Cup final were doused Wednesday night when Vancouver Burrards rallied from a four-goal deficit to win the best-of-seven final, 4-3, with a 12-11 decision. (See page 12)

Korean lobbyist indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury has returned a secret indictment against Tongsun Park, a central figure in the investigation of alleged South Korean influence-buying in Congress, the Washingon Post reports.

Park, a Korean-born, Washington-based businessman, fled after the investigation began last fall and was last reported to be in South Korea, which has no extradition treaty with the United States.

The Post says the sealed indictment on an unknown charge was filed last Friday in the court of U.S. District Judge John Pratt here.

A U.S. justice department spokesman declined comment on the story. Pratt told a reporter that he had received sealed grand jury indictments but that he did not know what they contained. Asked whether Park was among them, the judge said: "I know nothing about it."

Sources with the House of Representatives ethics committee said they also knew nothing about the reported indictment.

That kms to a million

British Columbia taxpayers will spend around $1 million for the right to call miles kilometres.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser told a news conference Wednesday it would cost almost $710,000 to convert B.C.'s 25,000 highway signs plus $350,000 to educate the public to the change.

The costs do not include local costs as municipal governments change their signs to metric. The taxpayer picks up that tab, too.

Of the 25,000 highway signs slated for the change, 15,000 are speed limit signs and 10,000 are distance signs. Another 8,000 signs — rail crossings, stop signs, etc., don't require conversion.

The advertising campaign will be run by the Vancocver firm of Walker, Ricks, Ehring Limited. It includes newspaper, radio and television advertising, some of which is already running, and a brochure, mailed to all 900,000 households in the province.

The switch to kilometres from miles starts today with school zones first on the conversion list. It will take about three weeks to make the complete change.

Fraser said that while the new signs and limits are legal and enforceable as soon as they are posted "we feel the police will use discretion for the first little while."

Pretoria taking port

PRETORIA (Reuter) — The South African government announced that beginning today the Atlantic port of Walvis Bay will cease to be part of South-West Africa (Namibia) and will belong to South Africa.

A proclamation said it was expedient and desirable that Walvis Bay, the only deep-water harbor on the barren and dangerous Southwest African coast, be administered as part of South Africa's Cape province. The Cape border is 400 miles from the port.

The change of status for Walvis Bay is linked to plans to give independence to the disputed territory of South-West Africa, administered by South Africa in defiance of the United Nations which says Pretoria's rule is illegal.

The UN-backed South-West African Peoples Organization, which is fighting a limited bush war against South African rule, has demanded that Walvis Bay remain part of the territory.

Smith appears sure of two-thirds margin

Colonist Wire Services

SALISBURY — Prime Minister Ian Smith retained control of parliament in Rhodesia's general election, and when vote-counting paused late Wednesday appeared certain of the two-thirds majority he needs to negotiate a racial settlement on his own terms.

Partial results of balloting by the mostly white electorate gave Smith's Rhodesian Front party 38 of the 44 seats he needs for a two-thirds majority in the House of Assembly. Returns from rural areas, where Smith is strong, were expected today.

There are 66 seats in the house, 50 reserved for whites.

Smith's party held 38 seats before the election, which he called in an attempt to obtain the 44-seat bloc that will enable him to make constitutional changes.

Such changes would allow him to work out a power-sharing arrangement with moderates in Rhodesia's black majority and resist an Anglo-American plan that is reported to call for his ouster and disbanding of Rhodesia's white-led armed forces.

Late Wednesday, Smith reiterated his intention to seek talks with local leaders not linked to black guerrillas who since 1972 have been fighting to topple his government. None of the moderate black leaders, however, has yet agreed to meet with Smith.

Smith said he already was looking forward to the next step in his plans for the country's future — a meeting today with British Foreign Secretary David Owen and Andrew Young, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Owen and Young are reported to be carrying plans for Smith's resignation to make

Zambia 'bombed' by jets after Rhodesian clash

LUSAKA (Reuter) — Zambia said Rhodesian jet aircraft bombed Zambian territory Wednesday near the Zambian border town of Feira.

A government spokesman said the raid came after an exchange of fire between Rhodesian and Zambian troops near Feira, which is close to the borders with Rhodesia and Mozambique.

The statement came three days after President Kenneth Kaunda had publicly predicted that Zambia would come under air attack shortly.

Pages to keep jobs for now

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

The revolt of the legislative pages is over and the teenage boys and girls who run errands for MLAs are back on the job until the end of the current sitting.

And nobody appears to know how far away that date is.

The house will adjourn this afternoon at least until Tuesday, but after that it's anybody's guess.

Speaker Ed Smith said the dismissal of the pages wasn't as harsh as it first appeared and that they weren't really "fired" at all.

Spokesman for the 14 pages, George Cessford, 15, agreed that there had been considerable misunderstanding on both sides.

Tuesday the pages were informed by Sergeant-at-Arms A. M. Hutchinson that their services would not be required after Wednesday's sitting.

A subsequent row in the Legislature over the way the pages were being told to go back to school led to a 50-minute meeting between Smith, the pages and Hutchinson.

Following the meeting, Cessford said he felt justice had been done, the pages assured they could continue at their posts until the house rises for its summer, fall or winter, break and "it was largely a misunderstanding, I guess," he said.

The pages' revolt began Aug. 17 when, through Cessford, they complained that their heavy blue serge uniforms with high-necked collars were oppressive during a heat wave.

That protest brought them some notoriety, raised eyebrows and no relief.

When they were told to pack their bags Tuesday, they

You might be hostages, warn Inuit

FORT CHIMO, Que. (CP) — Eskimo leaders warned Quebec government employees at a meeting here Wednesday they may use "some form of hostage-taking" if the civil servants do not leave town immediately.

Leaders of the Joint Community Councils of the Ungava and Hudson Coasts hinted at the meeting that if the employees did not leave soon, they may be prevented from leaving and would, in effect, become hostages.

● Ottawa weakly backing Inuit. Page 43

"If you don't leave now, when you do want to leave, we might not let you go," the Inuit were reported to have told the employees. But they added that no force or violence would be used "under any circumstances."

The Inuit did not say how they would carry out any action against the employees without using violence, but told them in what was described as uncharacteristically strong language to "pack and get out."

The meeting was conducted in Inuktituk, with everything translated into English and some of the talk re-translated into French.

It was the first time the two sides in the dispute had met face-to-face since the Inuit cut off water to government employees more than one week ago.

Charlie Tukalug, the delegate from Great Whale River, 700 miles north of here on the Hudson Bay coast, voiced the meeting's recurrent theme.

He said the Inuit were friends with the French until the Quebec government passed its language law, a law that he said would destroy the 4,000 Inuit of the province.

The traditional Inuit politeness is "a thing of the past," said Wally Makiak, the interpreter at the meeting. "Our patience has run out."

Each of the 35 delegates took their turn at hammering the point home— "Leave the North until the language law is changed."

Raoul St. Julien, the senior Quebec government official here, unsuccessfully tried to explain that the government had the sole responsibility to order their employees home. He said he is awaiting an order from his superiors.

In other developments, the Fort Chimo community council has told the local postmistress to cease delivery of mail-order liquor.

Council chairman Johnny Watts said the action was taken to avoid a worsening of tempers through alcohol in the already tense situation.

Some Quebec employees were reported to be showing worry and strain.

Suspect held in Fraser deaths

1976 pickup truck was missing. Despite roadblocks, the killer escaped. The vehicle was found July 19 in the underground parking lot of a downtown office and shopping development.

A number of empty shell casings and spatters of blood were found at the scene.

Also on July 19, the bodies of Evert Den Hertog and Bert Menger were found in the river. About a week later, the body of Jan Den Hertog was found in the river.

The wounds to the bodies, and their discovery near the scene of the shooting, indicated the youths had been shot and simply dumped in the river, police said, adding that all three died of gunshot wounds.

As the days passed, police concluded that loud music from the youths' truck may have touched off the shootings. Nearby a makeshift campsite was found.

RCMP had said the weapon used was either a .30-06 Enfield rifle, used in the first World War era or a Winchester.

Police had reconstructed the movements of the suspected killer up to 90 minutes before the shooting, when a man similar to the police description was seen pointing a rifle towards the river.

A man had been seen in the area the day of the shootings carrying an object of about the same size as the sport version of the weapon used in the shootings.

As the killer's trail cooled, police commissioned Dr. Anthony Marcus, head of forensic psychiatry at the University of British Columbia, to prepare a psychological profile of the killer.

Police also maintained public interest in the search by issuing revised drawings of the suspect. Police admitted, however, that the killer could have changed his appearance by cutting his hair or growing a beard.

Air Canada chiefs mark 40 years of service

VANCOUVER (CP) — Top executives of Air Canada were to fly to Seattle from Vancouver today to mark the 40th anniversary of the inauguration of the company's first air service.

Airline president Claude Taylor and chairman Pierre Taschereau were to lead a party flying a route first flown by Trans-Canada Air Lines in September, 1937, with a second-hand Lockheed Electra.

As part of the anniversary program, Air Canada directors held their first board meeting in Vancouver on Wednesday.

U.K. BIOLOGIST WARNS FELLOW SCIENTISTS:

Don't be political champions

BIRMINGHAM, England (Reuter) — Sir Andew Huxley, a Nobel Prize winner for biology, urged scientific bodies Wednesday to refrain from taking a stand on political issues such as the treatment of dissident scientists in the Soviet Union.

But Huxley, delivering his annual presidential address to the British Association of the Advancement of Science, also said scientists should not shy away from scientific controversy, such as the link between race and intelligence.

He said science could only claim to be listened to if its conclusions were based on what actually happened—not on "what we wish or hope" would happen.

For this reason, scientific bodies should not take a stand on issues such as the treatment of Soviet dissident scientists. These "brave individuals," were suffering for their political acts and not for their scientific opinions, he said.

Scientists who wished to protest should do so through oganizations concerned with human rights, not through scientific bodies which would lose the right to claim they were acting purely in defence of science when major scientific controversies arise in the future.

Giant otters kill soldier as he saves boy at zoo

BRASILIA (Reuter) — A 33-year-old Brazilian army sergeant was attacked and killed by giant Brazilian river otters Tuesday when he jumped into their pool at a municipal zoo to rescue a 13-year-old boy, military officials said.

They said the soldier managed to push the child to safety but was bitten more than 100 times by the otters, which are more than six feet long.

Protestant rebels defy Levesque's language caution

MONTREAL (CP) — The Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal has decided to stand firm in offering freedom of choice in the language of education, despite Premier Rene Levesque's charge that such a course would amount to civil disobedience.

Board chairman Joan Dougherty said Wednesday the board would "go through the motions" of obeying the regulations of Bill 101, the new French language charter, by using school registration forms provided by the Quebec government.

But the board would not force any child to go to a French school against the wishes of his parents, Mrs. Dougherty said.

"This isn't a save the PSBGM fight," she said. "This is a people's fight to save a pluralistic way of life, and the time has come when we can no longer allow the government to take away fundamental rights of individuals."

A resolution adopted at a board meeting Monday declared that it would advise parents of the implications of the language law but would leave to parents the final choice of whether they want their children educated in French or English.

The board also said it would back parents if they wanted to challenge the law in court and would appeal to the federal government to ask the Supreme Court of Canada for a ruling on the law's constitutionality.

Lang fears his position undermined by leaders

EDMONTON (CP) — Otto Lang, federal transport minister, said Wednesday there is a danger his position as a westerner in the cabinet is being undermined by attacks from western premiers.

Lang was responding to a letter from the four western premiers calling for a meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau to discuss delays in implementing the Hall commission recommendations.

In a telephone interview from his Ottawa office, Lang said the West was playing into the hands of other parts of the country but refused to say if he was referring to Quebec.

In a letter released Wednesday, Manitoba Premier Ed Schreyer, on behalf of his western colleagues, hit out at Lang's handling of the Hall commission report on prairie rail lines and grain handling.

He said it was becoming increasingly obvious the report was not being implemented in principle or spirit.

Lang said he found the request to go over his head and meet with Trudeau "a little funny."

"I would be glad to meet with them myself," he said, and added that he had made that offer earlier this summer but the premiers were not interested and sent their transport ministers instead.

"I seriously disagree with points in Mr. Schreyer's letter," Lang said. "I challenge them to suggest ways we could act quicker."

The only way to speed up action would be to act without thinking, he said.

Lang said an attack on his moves to establish a prairie rail authority and getting $100 million to rehabilitate railways in a time of restraint was absurd.

were convinced they were being fired for objecting to the winter-weight uniforms. Smith said that wasn't so, that they were merely being told their tour of duty was over and they could now go back to school.

Cessford admitted that there had been some confusion this year because of the length of the session. When the page service was established, a normal session would run from January to Easter.

Under the NDP, the length of sessions grew but they still ended in June and reconvened in the fall.

The current session started Jan. 13, adjourned June 6, reconvened July 13 and has been sitting five days and two nights a week ever since.

With the latest hassle over, Cessford said he still intended to enter politics when he's old enough. His ambition? To be premier because "that's where you can get things done."

Drownings inquest set

DUNCAN (CP) — Deputy coroner Dr. R. R. Wilson has set Oct. 11 to begin an inquest here into the July 28 drowning of seven handicapped persons on Lake Cowichan.

The seven died when the pontoon boat they were passengers in overturned, trapping them beneath the water. The accident occurred at a Lions Easter Seal camp at the lake.

way for a British-appointed administrator who would lay the ground for one-man, one-vote elections amongst Rhodesia's six million blacks and 270,000 whites for a black majority government.

Smith had demanded a mandate from the overwhelmingly white electorate to confront Owen and Young with a united white front and to help him reach his own settlement if the Anglo-American proposal is not satisfactory. He seemed to have been given that mandate late Wednesday.

The Rhodesian Front maintained a solid record of victory, from the moment results began to come in from the election — one in which fewer than 100,000 persons — mostly white — voted.

The Front crushed the ultra-right-wing Rhodesian Action party, formed by 12 Front rebels who campaigned on a platform of continued white supremacy. Similarly trampled was the National Unifying Force, which basically wants the Anglo-American plans for one-man one-vote accepted.

Smith has said repeatedly during the election campaign — and he repeated it Wednesday — that he would not grant a universal franchise.

He offered to set up a "broad-based" multi-racial government immediately after the election which would draw up plans for a new constitution based on majority rule — but not, he has stressed, "black" majority rule.

Gangbuster dies at 80

BOGNOR REGIS (Reuter) — Sir Ronald Howe, 80, the man who directed the fight against Britain's black market gangs in the Second World War has died at his southern England home. Sir Ronald, former head of Scotland Yard's criminal investigation department, had suffered from cancer of the jaw.

LONDON (Reuter) — Clyde Sanger, 49, a Canadian journalist with experience in Rhodesia, Kenya and the Caribbean, has been appointed information director of the London-based Commonwealth Secretariat. Sanger, currently employed by Canada's International Development Research Centre, will replace British journalist Nicholas Harman later this month.

Cal Tech working on hydrogen

Dye could give fuel source

By GEORGE ALEXANDER
Colonist - Los Angeles Times Service

CHICAGO — California Institute of Technology scientists have developed a dye which produces hydrogen gas from water exposed to ordinary sunlight.

The development, announced at the annual meeting of the American Chemical Society by Cal Tech chemistry professor Harry Gray, could become a significant source of energy some day.

"Hydrogen is an excellent fuel," Gray said, useful for a wide variety of energy and industrial purposes. Although it is abundant in water, the trick is to break apart the water molecule and liberate the hydrogen.

"That requires energy," Gray said, "and we're getting that energy from sunlight. No one has done this before except with ultraviolent radiation and, of course, very little of this particular solar energy gets through the Earth's atmosphere. But with our process, we could generate hydrogen on the roof of a building with ordinary sunlight."

The dye is essential to the Cal Tech process. It is a complex molecule containing a pair of rhodium atoms. When visible light strikes the compound, these metal atoms react to break down the bonds between oxygen atoms in the water molecules attached to the dye molecule.

The water is now separated into hydrogen and oxygen and it is a relatively simple matter to draw off the hydrogen gas.

The dye gives the water a blue color at first, Gray explained, but as the rhodium atoms are oxidized, the color changes to yellow. To reverse the system and enable the reaction to continue indefinitely, a way must be found to return electrons into the solution. This has yet to be achieved.

"What we've demonstrated in the laboratory," Gray said, "is the first half of the process. We haven't yet done the second half (returning electrons to the dye molecule) although we have several ideas on how this might be done. We don't regard it as a major problem."

Indeed, Gray and his Cal Tech co-workers, Dr. Kent Mann and undergraduate Nathan Lewis, are collaborating with Dr. Mark Wrighton of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on a return system. Wrighton has been experimenting with light-sensitive electrodes which generate a strong flow of oxygen gas from dissociated water. It is possible, Gray says, that the Cal Tech and MIT processes could be joined together to establish a continuous, balanced hydrogen-generating system.

At the moment, the Cal Tech professor of chemistry emphasized, the process was only a laboratory experiment and a great deal of research would have to be done before any kind of operational system could evolve.

Looking ahead 30 years or more, Gray said, there might be large hydrogen-generating plants located out in the ocean. With some kind of holding facility for the seawater, the rhodium-based dye would be introduced, the sunlight would strike the water, the reaction would occur and equipment would collect the hydrogen gas.

In the past few years, there has been considerable discussion and speculation about the so-called "hydrogen economy" — an economy predicated on large supplies of this fuel.

"This is exactly what we need to make the hydrogen economy go," Gray said. "If this research works out the way we think it will, it could break open the whole thing."

Anita twists towards Texas

GALVESTON, Tex. (UPI) — Hurricane Anita, Wednesday intensified its potential lethal winds and twisted slowly westward toward Texas where thousands of coastal residents have begun boarding their homes and businesses and some have started evacuating low-lying areas.

Atmospheric pressures driving inland ahead of the storm flooded scattered townships and sections of highways, particularly on offshore islands and peninsula. Squalls carrying heavy rain and 20 to 30 miles an hour winds began along the coast after noon.

Fletcher Hickerson, a civil defence spokesman in Baytown at the top of Galveston Bay, said approximately 1,200 people had been advised to evacuate their homes in low-lying areas.

Hickerson said "most of the city is not in danger," but those in low-lying areas have traditionally experienced flooding and closed roads in heavy storms. He said tides in those areas were expected to go over the danger point by midnight.

Massive parties hunting man-eater

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (UPI) — A party of 1,000 natives joined a massive hunt Wednesday for a man-eating lion which has slain eight persons over the past three months and terrorized villages only miles from the capital.

Game officials said Tanzanian army troops, local militia and police had joined native hunters and game wardens in the search throughout the hilly scrub countryside of Kibaha region, about 50 miles west of Dar Es Salaam.

Government officials staged a series of rallies in the area in a drive to enlist volunteer hunters and to try to calm the fears of villagers who have lived in growing terror since the lion first struck about three months ago.

Natives appealed to the government to capture the lion before it struck again and hunting parties were formed last week, spreading their area of search. Game wardens went from village to village recruiting tribesmen to join the hunt and to reassure villagers something was being done to protect them.

Local Wazaremo tribesmen, who farm and tend cattle and goats and live in unprotected bush country in outlying districts, were advised to move in with relatives inside the villages, officials said.

Lions, which stalk their prey and charge with lightning speed when they go for a kill, generally avoid man. However, once a lion becomes man-eating, it often prefers human flesh and may kill large numbers of natives if it is not hunted down and destroyed.

Ready for long battle

Air control aides out if any are suspended

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's air traffic control assistants decided on indefinite strike action Wednesday should any of their members be suspended on arrival at work today.

The Civil Aviation Authority was preparing suspension notices for any of its 850 assistants who refused to end their work-to-rule today in support of a pay claim.

But a spokesman for the men's union, the Civil and Public Services Association, said: "We will call a national strike as soon as the first man is suspended."

Both sides seem prepared for a long-drawn-out battle. The CAA is being backed by the Labor government, which is defending its anti-inflation policy on pay raise limits. The assistants are fighting for a 1975 pay settlement frozen by the government.

The assistants say their union has enough money to finance a strike until Christmas at least. "If management goes in for suspensions, we're going to have a very long haul. A very long dispute," a union spokesman said Wednesday.

Last weekend, the assistants staged a four-day strike timed to coincide with a public holiday here.

In fact, the flights operated more smoothly during that period with planned reductions of around 40 per cent in schedules, than when the men were at work.

Delays at British airports Wednesday on flights still scheduled were reported as minimal. However, some problems were caused by the Spanish and French air traffic controllers working to rule, an airport spokesman said.

Reports that the assistants' union was considering ordering a radio and radar blackout were denied Wednesday by national organizer John Macreadie. But the union is still discussing with specialist teleprinter operators and key clerical workers what part they might play should the dispute become worse.

Cobra venom death plot charged to wife, helper

MADISON, Wis. (UPI) — The estranged wife of a wealthy businessman and a man she allegedly hired have been charged with plotting to kill the woman's husband with cobra venom so it would look like a heart attack.

Mrs. Charlotte Durfee, 46, was charged with conspiracy to commit murder and Loren Moore, 46, was charged with solicitation to commit murder.

Authorities charged that a murder-for-hire plot was hatched to do away with Miles Durfee, 73, a Janesville, Wis., businessman who owns roofing companies in both Janesville and Madison, before divorce proceedings involving the couple were completed. The divorce proceedings were to have begun Friday.

A complaint filed in court said Moore talked to Vilas Park Zoo attendant Thornton Willoughby earlier this month and began asking questions about snake venoms that would be fatal but would look like heart attacks.

Moore told Willoughby, according to the complaint, that Mrs. Durfee had offered considerable money for the death of her husband. Moore offered Willoughby $5,000 for cobra venom, the complaint said.

Willoughby notified police and a trap was set for Moore. Moore was arrested here Monday night when he was reportedly handed a vial and syringe by Willoughby.

Moore then told police there was a written "contract" between him and Mrs. Durfee. In return for Durfee's death, the contract — according to the complaint — provided that Moore was to get $15,000 in cash, a farm near Janesville, remodelling of certain property and a job from Mrs. Durfee.

Mrs. Durfee faces a possible 30-year sentence if convicted, and Moore, married and the father of four children, faces a possible 10 years.

Sales tax discrimination

A SHARP POINT is made by Oak Bay MLA Scott Wallace in recent questioning in the legislature of Finance Minister Evan Wolfe on provincial sales tax application. And maybe it will stick.

The MD member says discrimination is being practiced against people "with valid medical needs" in having them pay the tax on medications not requiring a physician's prescription.

While the finance minister must appreciate that antacids, minerals and vitamins are valuable aids to better health and physical comfort, perhaps he hasn't realized, as Dr. Scott Wallace stresses, they are "essential" for many, particularly the elderly and handicapped.

But the social services tax, to give the sales tax its official description, is charged in purchases of these items, which makes no sense when exemptions are made for candies and soft drinks, which the good doctor frowns upon as "junk food."

Is the finance minister aware of this obvious discrimination, Dr. Scott Wallace asks.

More or less, might be the answer in the laborious explanation of the exemption principle of the tax Mr. Wolfe gives in reply: "In this instance (the exempting of junk food) the framers of the act, no doubt, did not take into consideration whether any specific food product was beneficial or not, but rather they desired to exempt foods for human consumption generally.

"This was a fundamental principle of the social services tax in order to make the tax less regressive. Many other essential items such as fuels, water, prepared meals, children's clothing, school supplies, etc., were also exempted.

"At the same time medicaments were exempted from the tax generally as another exemption principle but only on prescription. Non-prescription medicaments have been subject to the tax since its inception in 1948.

"As this tax is used to help pay for social services such as hospital insurance, medicare, social assistance, etc., it appears that the act was drafted so that every individual contributed. Thus items of very general usage such as tooth paste, tissue paper, vitamins, antacids, minerals, soaps, etc., remained subject to tax."

He then goes on to say that: "I have on my desk now requests for exemptions from social services tax that, if all granted, would eliminate 70 per cent of the tax revenue. The government, therefore, must be very careful in extending exemptions from this tax any further."

It appears from this that the "essentiality" of non-prescription medications Dr. Scott Wallace makes clear, somehow escapes Mr. Wolfe.

He does say, however, that there are continuing studies of the tax "and its application to, and effects on, various items of consumption," which gives hope, as faint as it is, that the wrong will be righted.

Too good too bad

HE MAY HAVE BEEN too young at the time of its showing to have had any interest in the film, I'm All Right Jack, that brilliant satire on British labor and management. But today it would help Dave Harrad understand his position.

The 23-year-old Ontario worker claims he lost his job because he worked too hard. Laid off by a Niagara Falls winery at the time of its annual mid-summer shutdown, Harrad was told he had an excellent chance of being rehired because he was such a good worker. When he wasn't and asked why, Harrad says the reason given was the same — because he was such a good worker.

The story goes that Harrad had been assigned to scrape mould off a vat and when it took him only half a day to do the job, another worker told him he could end up in hospital if he continued to work so hard — and it wouldn't be from over-exertion.

Harrad was quick to realize that the incident led to his lay-off being made permanent, which was later confirmed by a company official who said he'd been impressed by the man's willingness to work but that it created problems with other employees: "He didn't fit in. You can't run a plant if the workers are unhappy and they were unhappy with this guy. Sometimes exceptional workers provide too many problems."

On the local union side, a spokesman couldn't believe that any permanent employee would threaten the hard-working Harrad, but he couldn't speak for the summer help and suggested that a part-time student might be the culprit.

Anyway, while Harrad now has to be counted among the 878,000 Canadian unemployed, but for his efforts the latest Statistics Canada total would have been higher by the number required to take his place, if that's any consolation.

U.S. corporate invasion now a retreat

For three decades Canadians were assured that the international operations of large U.S. corporations were continuously expanding and that their economic future would be determined by the eagerness with which they accommodated themselves to this trend, usually by acquiescing in extensive U.S. ownership of their industries. The U.S. corporate invasion of Canada has been without precedent among contemporary nations, but this was described as the precondition of industrial advance.

But now Fortune magazine, a major U.S. business journal, has cast strong doubt on these theories in an article in its August, 1977 issue entitled, "Why the multinational tide is ebbing," which documents a dramatic retreat of U.S. corporations from overseas operations. Quoting from an unpublished study, Fortune says that in the years 1971-1975, U.S. corporations sold off 1,359, or almost 10 per cent, of their foreign subsidiaries.

The rate at which U.S. firms have been establishing foreign subsidiaries has been subsiding rapidly. In 1971 there were 3.3 new investments overseas by U.S. firms for every closing out of a foreign operation, and by 1975 this ratio has shrunk to 1.4 to one.

The Fortune analysis terms the withdrawal of U.S. firms from foreign operations disinvestment and advances several theories to account for it. In such low-technology industries as textiles, leather goods, tires and beverages, U.S. foreign affiliates often found it difficult to compete with aggressive local firms. U.S. firms find the conditions they must face in running foreign plants are more onerous than running plants in the United States. European and Canadian wage rates have overtaken U.S. rates and the rates of absenteeism and labor turnover are higher.

In the recent recession U.S. firms found it much more difficult to lay off workers in Europe than in the United States owing to strong job security legislation in European nations. Some U.S. firms declared that they would concentrate future investment in the United States because of more accommodating U.S. labor laws. Many European nations, for instance, require that firms grant their workers at least four weeks annual vacations.

The foreign operations of U.S. firms are also being inhibited by frequent nationalizations. All the member nations of OPEC, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, are bringing their petroleum industries under government ownership. In many nations when local managers of U.S. firms achieve a high level of competence, they petition their governments to expropriate the U.S. firms.

When U.S. direct foreign investment was gaining momentum after the Second World War, the United States was the world's pre-eminent industrial power, producing more than half the world's industrial goods, and its firms possessed managerial and technological skills which were not duplicated in other nations. But now firms of other nations are confronting U.S. firms with competition of a ferocity and skill they have not heretofore experienced, and many of the U.S. firms in the more routine lines of business are discarding their foreign affiliates.

The U.S. corporate giants are also running into increasing rivalry in high-technology industrial fields. Of the seven largest world chemical firms, only two are U.S.-owned. The 1976 sales of U.S.-owned E.I. Du Pont de Nemours of $8.361 billion were lower than the 1976 sales of West Germany's Hoechst at $9.332 billion, West Germany's BASF at $9.202 billion, and only slightly higher than West Germany's Bayer at $8.297 billion. The second largest U.S. chemical firm, Dow Chemical had 1976 sales of $5.652 billion, lower than the 1976 sales of Britain's Imperial Chemical Industries at $7.465 billion, and Italy's Montedison at $5.826 billion.

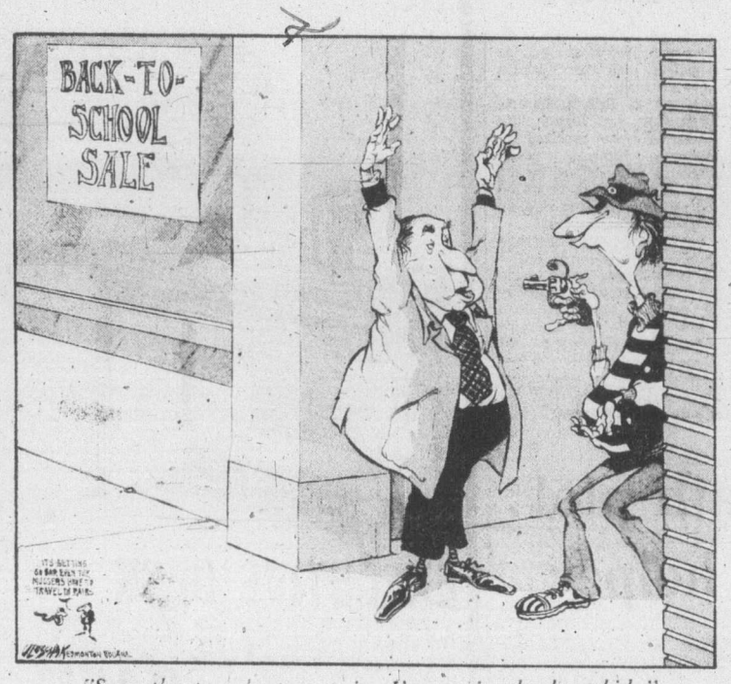

In pharmaceuticals, the largest Swiss firms, Ciba-Geigy, with 1976 sales of $3.796 billion, and Hoffman-La Roche, with 1976 sales of $2.046 billion, both are larger than the largest U.S. firm, Pfizer with 1976 sales of $1.888 billion, and the third largest Swiss firm, Sandoz with 1976 sales of $1.644 billion, is only marginally smaller than the second largest U.S. firm, Merck with 1976 sales of $1.662 billion.

The Canadian government has been the most enthusiastic in welcoming the establishment by U.S. companies of local subsidiaries. Other nations have been much more reserved in accepting investments by U.S. firms and have been at pains to ensure that U.S. subsidiaries did not displace local firms on the domestic market and have been notably reluctant to see large U.S. companies buy control of domestically-owned enterprises. The Canadian policy of inviting foreign companies to swamp the local market, to the point that local firms were either forced to sell out, or driven into a numbed state of unprofitability, never won much favor with other national governments.

Now, nations like Japan, Switzerland and Sweden, which have always excluded U.S. direct investment, do not feel themselves at a disadvantage as their locally-owned firms dominate the local markets and win huge sales in external markets. Other nations, such as West Germany and the Netherlands, which have never encouraged U.S. direct investment to the point that the corporate board was swept clean of local firms, are reaping the profits as their firms increase their shares of the local markets and win increased sales abroad.

Canada should contemplate with ruthless honesty the implications of U.S. corporate "disinvestment" since much of what passes for an industrial strategy in this nation has consisted of dusting off the welcome mat for U.S. firms. Data released by the Canadian government shows that in 1970 Canada received direct foreign investment, mostly from the United States, worth $905 million, and in 1976 direct foreign investment in Canada had gone into deficit by $395 million, indicating that the process of "disinvestment" in Canada is already well under way.

U.S. control of Canadian industry carries immense costs. To cite one example, it has been found that in 1970 Canadian manufacturing industries, mostly U.S.-owned, devoted only 0.87 per cent of their sales to research and development, whereas U.S. manufacturing industries spent 2.6 per cent of their sales on R&D. The costs of U.S. ownership of Canada's industries and the disinclination of U.S. firms to undertake foreign operations should combine to induce the Canadian government to encourage the development and expansion of Canadian-owned manufacturing firms.

American economy growing as dollar slumps overseas

By HARRY B. ELLIS
The Christian Science Monitor

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The mighty U.S. economy, shaking off the last vestiges of recession, seems disinclined to do anything by half measures, either good or bad.

Here at home the economy is growing briskly — a spanking 6.9 percent annual pace in the first half of the year — while overseas the dollar paradoxically weakens and the U.S. piles up its worst trade deficit in history.

By contrast, Japan and West Germany — the non-Communist world's other giants — are having trouble meeting their growth targets, but are amassing huge trade surpluses while their currencies grow stronger.

Confusing signals? On the surface, yes. But a pattern emerges, giving some insight into what may happen the rest of this year and into 1978.

Two fundamental economic problems — inflation and unemployment — show little sign of early improvement, either in the United States or abroad.

In the U.S. inflation hovers around six percent, broadly measured, and the jobless rate at last count stood at 7.1 percent — second only to Canada's eight per cent in the non-Communist industrial world.

On the jobless front, the U.S. is doing better than those figures indicate. The American labor force — the total of people at work or looking for jobs — is growing so rapidly that more than six million new jobs have been added to the economy since the low point of recession in May, 1975.

Given the upsurge in the number of job-seeking Americans, the economy must grow four percent yearly simply to absorb newcomers. Over the last two years the economy on average has done better than that, putting newcomers to work and shrinking the jobless tolls from 8.9 percent in May, 1975, to 7.1 percent in June, 1977.

If the economy is doing relatively so well, why does the dollar weaken and why does the trade deficit threaten to reach $25 billion this year, nearly four times the previous record shortfall of 06.4 billion in 1972?

To take the last point first, America's insatiable appetite for foreign oil — more than $40 billion worth this year — makes it impossible for U.S. exports of farm and manufactured goods to erase the red ink.

Indeed, the more the U.S. economy prospers — and American factories now operate at 83.5 percent capacity, up from 80 percent in January — the more oil the nation needs. All experts agree that, for some time to come, petroleum imports will continue to grow.

Also, because the U.S. snapped out of recession faster than other nations, Americans are able to buy more foreign goods, while nations still struggling with recession can afford fewer U.S. products.

So the trade deficit is explainable. But when the red ink becomes an ocean, as it now is, currency speculators — fearing future damage to the the U.S. economy — begin to move out of dollars into stronger currencies, like those of Japan, West Germany, and Switzerland.

The trend quickens, feeding on itself, to the point that U.S. officials debate how much the Federal Reserve System should intervene — that is, buy and sell foreign currencies in an effort to keep the dollar stable.

If the dollar weakens too much, the oil-exporting nations of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), who peg their oil prices to the dollar, might decide to boost the cost of oil.

Also, a declining dollar makes Japanese, German and other foreign goods more expensive in the U.S., adding to inflationary pressures.

Japan and West Germany, meanwhile, although growing more sluggishly than expected, find ready overseas markets for their goods and post huge trade surpluses.

Putting all this together, U.S. experts expect the following:

- The U.S. economic growth rate will slow to around five per cent for the rest of the year.
- This should suffice to edge the unemployment rate slightly below seven per cent by the end of 1977.
- Inflation is likely to hang tough at the six per cent level, but hopefully will go no higher.
- Oil imports will continue to grow, expanding the trade deficit and exerting steady pressure on the value of the dollar.

Gwynne Dyer

Partition needless tragedy conclusion 30 years later

Three military governments ago, back in 1963, I spent some time in the "protective custody" of the Pakistan Army. Friends I was travelling with had shown the unwisdom to question publicly whether the creation of Pakistan had been a good idea, which greatly annoyed General Ayub Khan, the dictator then running the country. But it was still a good question.

August was the 30th anniversary of partition, when Britain carved its Indian empire up between India and Pakistan, and the answer is fairly clear by now. The creation of Pakistan was an absolutely terrible idea. Unfortunately, at the time all the other solutions seemed even worse.

The proudest achievement of the British Raj was the unification of the whole subcontinent for the first time in history. In the last century of British rule all India from the highlands of Afghanistan to the Burmese hills, from the Himalayas to Cape Comorin lived at peace under a single, impartial government.

It was an achievement comparable to uniting all of Europe, and it probably could only have been achieved by foreign conquerors. When it came time for the conquerors to depart in 1947, they were desperately anxious to pass on their great creation unbroken. What defeated them was history.

For almost a thousand years before the British arrived in India, most of the subcontinent had been ruled by successive waves of Muslim conquerors. Almost a quarter of the population became Muslim in time, but relations between the conquered Hindu masses and their Muslim rulers varied from bad to atrocious. The coming of the British overthrew Muslim rule, however, and under a government of Christian foreigners, Hindu and Muslim got equal treatment.

When the movement for Indian independence really got going in the 1920s, it was inevitably the Hindus who dominated. Gandhi and most of the other leaders, however, were determined to create a secular India, precisely because it was the only kind in which the Muslims would feel safe.

Nevertheless, the Muslim community began to panic at the prospect of exchanging impartial British rule for the unpredictable tolerance of the Hindu majority. In 1940 the Muslim League adopted the goal of a separate Pakistan, and support for the idea among Muslims grew like wildfire.

Partition was a solution much favored in the closing days of the British Empire: in Ireland in 1922, and in Palestine just one year after India in 1948. Every time, the argument was that different races or different religions could not live at peace together.

It is the same argument that reaches its ultimate expression in the apartheid and Bantustan policies of South Africa, and it is almost always a self-fulfilling prophecy. Partition has also usually been a miserable, violent failure so far as establishing peace is concerned.

In India, admittedly, the gulf between religious attitudes was especially wide. Hinduism is the only survivor of the great ancient religions, with a jostling pantheon of gods, infinite divisions of class and caste, and a mystical attachment to the sacred soil of India. Islam is the newest and most austere of the monotheistic religions that long ago swept the old paganism away elsewhere, and good Muslims cannot help viewing Hinduism with horror.

By 1946 Muslim and Hindu extremists were insisting that the two communities could not live together, and organizing massacres to prove their point. So the two parts of India where Muslims were in a majority were set up as the separate state of Pakistan.

A million people died and 10 million became refugees in the panic-stricken scramble to avoid being left as a minority on the wrong side of the new border. The inevitable disputes about the borders have led to two further wars between India and Pakistan, in 1965 and 1971, and a monstrous burden of arms expenditure.

The artificial state of Pakistan, whose only uniting factor was a common Muslim faith, has never gained its balance. It has stumbled from one military intervention to another, and in 1971 split in two amidst further nightmarish communal massacres. The latest Pakistani military government has once more resorted to appeals to Muslim fundamentalism: Pakistan is now the only country besides Saudi Arabia where thieves have their left hands amputated.

This would all be sad but inevitable if it had been true that Muslims and Hindus could not live together safely. But dispersion of Muslims throughout India prevented a neat solution, and as many Muslims were left behind in India as now live in Pakistan. They have not been massacred or victimized. India remained a secular state, and Hindu extremism never did take over.

Without partition, the subcontinent would today be a united country of 775 million people (around a quarter of them Muslims) and the chances seem good that they would be living together in relative peace. Certainly there would have been no wars, no millions of refugees, no immense waste of money on arms. And they might all be enjoying the democratic heritage which India itself, however precariously, has managed to preserve.

It is 30 years too late to do anything about it. Pakistan and Bangladesh are realities, and somehow they will have to make their own ways in the world. But partition was not only a tragedy; it was probably a needless tragedy.

London boils with racism

The spectacular violence of Britain's right-wing National Front demonstrations in south London's Lewisham area and in Birmingham has led to serious debate in the press and in the prime minister's office about whether to ban such provocative marches through "immigrant" neighborhoods.

The government and press refer even to those Asians and blacks born here as immigrants.

But the violence has failed to focus British attention on the almost daily terror experienced by British blacks and Asians in National Front areas.

(As a political organization said to reject parliamentary democracy, the National Front has links with fascist groups of the 1930s but has not come close to winning any seats in Parliament.)

When Britain's National Front marched through south London Aug. 13, the all-white party ran a gauntlet of rocks, bottles, bricks, and smoke bombs. But the march went on through the largely black area, past the home of a young black woman still suffering from burns caused one month earlier when young National Front memebers threw acid over her.

One Indian resident of east London said: "Our physical safety is threatened. One family's door was broken down by the National Front and the family beaten, including a 13-year-old boy. What is worse is that the police have not brought those responsible to justice."

Many black and Asian residents in areas where the front is strong believe the police tacitly support the front by not investigating attacks against nonwhites. One Asian society here prepared a document for presentation to Queen Elizabeth on attacks against her subjects here.

Among the National Front offences it lists are:

- "Labor Party members were beaten by NF thugs while distributing antifascist leaflets in Hackney, east London."
- Shortly after an NF meeting, two young blacks six and seven years old, were savagely beaten up by a white man.
- National Front thugs ransacked offices of Des Perdesh, a Junjabee newspaper in Rochester, Kent.
- The attack on an elderly Indian woman in her home in Leamington by two white youths, who dragged her out into the garden and burned her.
- The attack on an American black visiting this country in London's Notting Hill Gate. He was coming back to his apartment at night when he was attacked by white youths shouting 'nigger.'

The front is openly racist, calling for the expulsion of blacks and Asians from Britain. Extreme leftist parties, notably the Socialist Workers' Party, are calling for the elimination of the front and admit that their purpose in starting violence at front marches is to deny it any public forum.

Opposition parties, churchmen, and local governments are demanding a ban on National Front marches, which insult blacks and Asians and threaten public safety.

British blacks and Asians are looking to the government to give a lead in protecting their rights and safety.

Egypt, Libya cool tension

By DON A. SCHANCHE from Cairo
Colonist-Los Angeles Times Serivce

After exchanging prisoners held since their "weekend war" of a month ago, Egypt and Libya appear to be approaching a formal — if temporary — truce in the hostilities that have marked relations between the two countries since 1973.

Diplomatic sources confirmed that senior Libyan and Egyptian military officers will meet in the border town of Salum — scene of some of the bloody fighting of July 21-24 — to negotiate a "standback" agreement designed to avoid future border clashes.

The meeting is seen as a climax to a month of low-level negotiations that began between military officers of the two nations almost before the fighting ended. The present easing of hostilities apparently did not result from the mediation efforts of other Arab leaders or of Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat. Arafat shuttled between Cairo and Tripoli purportedly attempting to patch up differences between Libya's mercurial Col. Moammar Khadafy and Egypt's President Anwar Sadat.

The temporary agreement appears to be mainly a military one, made for the convenience of both sides, which have beefed up their border forces since the four-day war to such numbers that a continued face-off would have been too costly for either to maintain.

For its part, Libya was believed to have been genuinely hurt militarily during the brief war, and was ill-equipped to maintain a large portion of its 30,000-man army in readiness for renewed attacks.

The temporary truce agreement that officers will begin to prepare apparently will allow for considerable reductions in force on both sides, and for pull-back in some areas to avoid direct and prolonged confrontation, the sources said.

"It is a kind of military 'time out,' " said one source in Cairo, "but there has been nothing to indicate that any of the basic disagreements between the two countries have been resolved."

As a Soviet-supplied nation's leader and a Middle East "rejectionist" that opposes any peace negotiations with Israel, Khadafy has long been an embarrassing headache to anit-Soviet, pro-peace Egypt. Khadafy also has aroused Sadat and other Arab and African moderates by supplying rebel forces in neighboring Chad and allowing a flow of Soviet military supplies to the Marxist government of Ethiopia, which is fighting against secessionists on two fronts.

During the weeks since Sadat launched his "bloody nose" punitive raids against Libya, Khadafy has further annoyed Egypt by signing a series of agreements with its tiny neighbor, Tunisia, providing for economic co-operation and Libyan use of Tunisian skilled and unskilled labor.

Observers interpreted the Tunis-Tripoli agreements as possibly Khadafy's way of thumbing his nose — however bloodied — at Sadat, since Libya has long been the Middle East's prime market for surplus Egyptian labor. More than 200,000 Egyptians, from physicians and schoolteachers to farm laborers, work in Libya and contribute their savings to Egypt's needy economy.

"The agreement to absorb surplus Tunisian labor may be Khadafy's way of telling Sadat that at least some of those Egyptians can be replaced," said an observer.

'Protest Trident'

It always concerns me when the government suppresses its political opinions because a firm statement carries political danger. The legislature has before it a motion condemning the building of bases like the Trident missile base 60 miles south of Victoria. Thirty-five of 57 members have given assurance that they would vote for the motion if it came to the floor. Yet it has been assigned a low priority, presumably because the value of such a statement would be overridden by the political embarrassment.

This summer, many B.C. citizens stated their opinion much more clearly. A dozen Canadians including two Victorians were included among more than 50 people who were arrested for trespassing at Bangor. Demonstrations took place all through July and August climaxing with a gathering of 2,000 peaceful protesters on Aug. 14. All these actions insisted that there's a more life-giving use for the Bangor site than for sub pens and nuclear storage bunkers.

Several governing bodies have made clear statements, including the B.C. Federation of Labor, the Victoria Labor Council, the Victoria United Church Presbytery, the North Saanich municipal council and the Vancouver municipal council. Speak up, MLAs!

Deficit

I wonder how many readers noticed the small item in the Aug. 14 issue, and of those how many realized what the figures meant? In April, May and June our federal government spent $2.993 million over its income — that is 32.5 million inflationary dollars pumped into the system each day. Then in Tuesday's Colonist there was a report that Ottawa was borrowing $1,000 million to pay back $500 million in bonds which are now due.

With that kind of financial behavior how can anyone expect inflation to decline, or our dollar to stabilize? While much of the blame must fall on the politicians who obviously haven't the will to take the type of action required by a near bankrupt firm or family the public is not blameless. We squawk like spoiled brats if governments fail to fulfil our every desire.

In the long term this same inflation has led to our serious unemployment. Canada has to live by its exports: if we don't keep our costs in line with world prices, in no way will citizens have long-term job security. Cooling the inflation fever must have priority because of its serious effect on employment.

So, all good citizens, please consider the long term effect on our country when you next lobby for more largesse from governments, or bleat for higher returns or salaries. And, perhaps, give public officials who have managed to balance budgets a small thank you, even if by so doing they squeezed your pet project.

One last query. When the cost of living index is computed, is the cost of governmental deficits included?

Movie

Why Shoot The Teacher at the Oak Bay Theatre is everything that Gorde Hunter says it is, and more. Born on the Prairies, and taking my first six grades in a one-room school house helped me relate to some of these hilarious scenes. Silvio Narizzano directs a very believable story for those who lived through the Dirty Thirties.

People who object to the modern trend of violence and vulgarity of many of today's shows will find this picture a pleasure to see. My concern is that many Victorians will not hear about this unusual and interesting film before it leaves town. Bud Cort is excellent in his role as the new Prairie teacher, as are all the cast in this Canadian film.

Rodeos

I am once again surprised that one of our leading men's clubs cannot think of a better way of raising money than abusing animals for entertainment.

If the Royal Oak Lion's Club was a tame affair as rodeos go, it still must be classed as an unacceptable performance, quite unjustified by the club's worthy projects. I have seen calves busted, horns cracked, ears bitten, necks twisted, bucking-strap burns, spur cuts.

The Humane Society of the United States commissioned a scientific study of rodeos by a team of specialists in bovine and equine animal care. Summaries of this report may be obtained from the undersigned. To date no rodeo group has presented any scientific data to refute the findings of the study.

No amount of policing can make rodeos humane. They depend for their thrill on violent conflict between man and animal. The man voluntarily takes a risk of injury, the animal has no choice.

If the Lions club persists in sponsoring such abuse of animals, I urge your readers to stay away from its rodeo and render it unprofitable.

Fire news

I would like to express my sincere appreciation for the most helpful co-operation received from all areas of the news media during the recent prolonged heat wave during which the area faced such an explosive fire hazard.

It is my opinion that without the publicity received from the media the area could have suffered severe forest fires, defacing many of our natural green belts which we all enjoy so much.

Again, thank you for a job well done.

Raise hunting fees — guides

What is an animal's life worth? This is no idle question. The pricing of licence fees has a lot to do with game management and the number of active hunters.

The northern guides and outfitters have argued for many years that the price of tags for B.C.'s most attractive game has been too low, almost an insult to nature.

Take for instance, the price of a tag to hunt the stone sheep. It costs the resident hunter $25. That's not much for an animal that took eight or nine years to mature.

Quite apart from the dignity of the beast, which is impossible to put a price on, look at the feed it consumes in its lifetime. Consider its value to the flock. Mature rams guide the flock through the winter. Is all this to be bought for $25?

At present the answer is yes. The same situation applies to all other game animals. It is interesting to note that the tag fee charged to the non-resident hunter is very much higher; it currently stands at $250 for a stone sheep and the price of other tags is comparable. Even the hunting licence itself costs $75 compared to the resident's $7.

These rates seem a much truer reflection of the actual value of a game animal. The guides consider it should be worth that much to any serious hunter wherever he comes from. They are not trying to abolish the differential between the resident and the non-resident but it seems clear that the province's 183,000 resident hunters must pay a more realistic price for their hunt. Such an increase in rates would be entirely beneficial to the hunting industry. Fewer hunters would be in the field chasing depleted game stocks; it would reflect more properly the value of the game; and the extra funds would be a shot in the arm for the fish and wildlife branch budget. (The government likes to see the revenues from hunting tied closely to the expense of the branch.) And incidentally, the present anomalous situation where the revenues from 3,800 non-residents subsidizes the license fees of 133,000 residents would be ended.

Even if the non-resident and the resident paid the same for their licences and tags, the non-resident would still be paying a lot more for his hunt. He really pays what the animal is worth.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — A White House statement that U.S. President Carter had no plans for government wage-and-price standards started a late rally in the stock market Wednesday.

The New York Stock Exchange's composite index rose 0.16 to 52.93.

The market came to life after Jody Powell, Carter's press secretary, said there was "absolutely no" plan being considered by the President to set up wage-price standards.

Stock prices had fallen Tuesday on reports some officials in the administration felt such standards might be needed.

Powell did not rule out the possibility that some officials in the administration might be studying the subject on their own. But he said Carter himself had given no consideration to the idea.

There is strong opposition among Wall Streeters and many other business executives to any government controls, voluntary or not, on wages and prices.

Analysts said the late upswing also was supported by the agriculture department's report of a third consecutive monthly decline in prices received by farmers.

Falling commodity prices have been the major source this summer of hopes that the pace of inflation will slow considerably.

Among Canadian issues listed on the New York Stock Exchange, Campbell Red Lake finished up at ⅝ at $27⅝, Bell Canada ⅜ at $49⅜, and Dome Mines ¼ at $51.

Massey Ferguson closed down ⅛ at $16½ and Alcan Aluminum was unchanged at $25½ and McIntyre Mines at $29½.

Bomb site inspected

RCMP officer inspects damage caused early Wednesday to main office building in Hartland, N.B., of Day and Ross Ltd., a major trucking firm. Company facilities in New Brunswick were bombed at least three times Wednesday. Company official said he believed bombings were "a last gasp effort" as Quebec Haulers Association, an organization representing independent truckers in Quebec, grows weaker.

'Slump can be overcome'

Canada's economy needs labor peace

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's slumping economy can rebound if employee-employer relationships are improved, J. Hugh Stevens, president of the Canadian Manufacurers' Association, said Wednesday.

"There is no doubt in my mind that if we are to return to a better economic performance in terms of overcoming inflation and creating more jobs, we must put at the top of the priority list improvements in employer-employee relations," he said in a speech to a meeting of directors of the Canadian National Exhibition.

There must be improvements in the "whole structure of laws, regulations, tribunals or whatever, which affect the nature of this relationship.

"And yet, it is the area where most of us have been reluctant to consider the hard realities, and come to grips with the changes that must take place."

Stevens said the association was disppointed at the impasse that resulted from recent tripartite talks between the federal government, unions and business leaders over the post anti-inflation control period.

"Perhaps, too much was expected of the tripartite consultations."

Stevens said industry must recognize that there was an urgent need to adopt new approaches to labor-management relations.

Unless the initiative comes from the management and employees, "governments will act to create the new rules."

Text of his speech was released before delivery.

Record revenue balance recorded by Royal Bank

MONTREAL (CP) — The Royal Bank of Canada reported Wednesday a record balance of revenue after taxes of $122.3 million or $3.34 a share for the nine months ended July 31, up 2.3 per cent from $119.6 million or $3.27 a share for the corresponding period last year.

Earle McLaughlin, chairman and chief executive officer of the bank, said in a company statement that assets had reached $32.7 billion as of July 31, an increase of 18 per cent from the third quarter figure last year.

He also said the major reason for an increase of 26 per cent in operating expenses other than staff and property costs was a special allowance for possible loan losses, particularly in the domestic area.

"We feel it prudent to make these provisions in view of the current economic climate," he said in the statement.

A Royal Bank spokesman said the bad-debt expense was based on an average overall estimate.

For example, the bank stands to lose $40 million on the bankruptcy of QSP Ltd., a Quebec manufacturer of steel products, but it may recoup some of the loss if it can sell plant buildings, he said.

The Royal was the the major banker for QSP Ltd. which declared bankruptcy two months ago.

Total Royal Bank loans wer $20.8 billion as of July 31, up 20 per cent from the corresponding date last year and total deposits were $29.8 billion, up 18 per cent, he said.

Third quarter balance of revenue after taxes was $39.2 million or $1.07 a share, up from $37.5 million or $1.02 a share for the corresponding period in 1976.

Sign of unhealthy economy?

Whisky losing favor among U.S. drinkers

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans have tended to drink less whisky and more wine and beer in the last few years, which liquor industry officials claim is a significant indicator of an unhealthy economy.

"When the economy is bad, not as much liquor is consumed, it's as simple as that," said a spokesman for a national organization that monitors the industry. "Since 1973, the rate of growth has declined."

An analyst specializing in the distilled spirits market, however, disagreed, saying the industry has "several problems to overcome.

"The economy is growing modestly, and there is talk that growth in the economy is slowing down," said a Value Line Investment Survey analyst who asked not to be identified. "The economy is not good, but neither is it bad."

Industry surveys indicate fewer people drink as much as they did in the late 1960s. Many people have decided they would rather drink cheaper beverages, such as beer and wine.

While earnings are down, most major companies plan to boost prices this fall, said the spokesman for the national monitoring group.

"There has been a long trend toward a smaller percentage of the consumer dollar going toward distilled spirits," he said.

"Distilled prices compared to other consumer prices are tremendously lower. But sooner or later, the prices are going to have to reflect increasing costs."

North Slope crude oil for Gulf Coast sent through Panama

BALBOA, Panama (AP) — The first shipment of North Slope crude oil from Alaska moved through the Panama Canal Wednesday bound for refineries on the Gulf Coast.

The canal's chief planner, Hugh Norris, predicted pipelines will eventually do the job faster and cheaper.

The 276,000-barrel shipment Wednesday should reach the refineries about five days after clearing the canal, officials said.

Other shipments will follow to refineries in Houston, Tex., Baton Rouge, La., and other Gulf ports in ships with capacities ranging from 231,000 to 385,000 barrels.

The canal will be used to ship crude "only until alternative routes are found," Norris said.

"This is an interim arrangement, alternatives will develop, and a pipeline from Alaska to the Midwest would probably be more economical than shipping through the canal," Norris added.

He said the oil companies will pay 12 to 15 cents a barrel, about 15 million a year, in canal transit tolls. That would be an increase of 11 per cent in the $135 million in tolls collected by the canal company in 1976.

Norris said studies were being made of an existing natural gas line from Long Beach, Calif., to Midland, Tex., which he said might be converted to carry the North Slope crude.

U.S. shipping through the canal, which has declined to 4.7 million tons last year from 13.5 million tons in 1924 — "may soar again if the Alaskan North Slope crude oil moves through the canal as planned," a recent report by the canal planning office predicted.

The oil going through the canal is owned by Standard Oil Co. of Ohio, which controls half of the North Slope oil, Norris said.

He said oil going through the canal is "leftover" crude that cannot be handled by West Coast refineries.

Pound rises to $1.74

Share prices up, highest in years

LONDON (AP) — British share prices rose Wednesday to their highest level in 4½ years.

The Financial Times industrial index jumped 10 points to close at 500.9, the first time the index reached the psychologically important 500 barrier since January, 1973.

"Everyone is very, very bullish," said one London dealer as British investors and foreigners poured money into British stocks and bonds.

Two years ago, the index fell to 146 and the world was prophesying doom for the British economy.

The pound, which dropped to an all-time low of $1.5685 U.S. on Oct. 28, 1976, had recovered to $1.74 on the foreign exchanges, and Britain's foreign currency and gold reserves were mounting.

Coffee countries back Mexico price proposal

NAIROBI (Reuter) — All eight producer countries at the International Coffee Organization board meeting here Wednesday backed a Mexican proposal for stabilizing coffee prices, board sources said.

The executive board discussed the plan for a buffer against violent price fluctuations for 2½ hours.

The sources said the largest consumer country, the United States, also was in favor of the proposal at the closed meeting Wednesday.

The Mexican plan, backed by 11 Latin countries at a meeting in Mexico City last week, calls for a fund to which both consumers and producers would contribute to buy buffer stocks.

The ICO includes both coffee-producing and importing countries.

Crane closing pump works

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Crane Canada Ltd. announced Tuesday it would begin to close its domestic water pump manufacturing operation in Cornwall by Sept. 30.

General Manager Martin Collier refused to say why the company was closing its domestic pump operation. It moved to the city from Quebec 1½ years ago. A company statement said the closure will affect 30 persons.

No new budget for B.C.

Canadian Press

Premier Bennett said Wednesday the B.C. government, like the federal government, was not planning a new budget after a 2.4-per-cent decline in the gross national product.

Bennett told the Legislature that economic measures taken by his Social Credit government "don't need correction now."

The premier said economic trends in the province had been running contrary to those in the rest of the country.

The growth in employment was at a three-per-cent annual rate, Bennett said, twice the national average. As well, the gross provincial product had grown at an annual rate of five per cent.

Conservative Scott Wallace (Oak Bay) suggested that in the face of a recently announced provincial surplus, and in the face of record savings deposits in B.C., the government should cut its seven-per-cent sales tax to stimulate buying.

Bennett said sales tax collectors had increased this year, and that was an obvious sign that consumers were already spending more money, and that a reduction in the tax wasn't needed.

Veitch to chair Oakalla parley

Elwood Veitch (SC — Burnaby-Willingdon) will chair a special committee to commence the phase-out and ultimate demolition of Oakalla prison.

Public Works Minister Alex Fraser said Wednesday the committee would also consider the ultimate use of Oakalla lands and recommend to the government the method by which the old buildings should be dismantled.

The committee will be comprised of four members of the public, a member of Burnaby council and Veitch.

Fraser's announcement is the first move toward the phase-out of Oakalla since it was first promised when Alex Macdonald (NDP — Vancouver East) was attorney general.

Wilkinson Road jail is also earmarked for eventual phase-out "sometime in the future."

UIC payout dips 12% during June

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of people receiving unemployment insurance benefit payments dropped by 12 per cent to 641,000 during June, while the payment total fell by 23 per cent to $280 million, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

Females accounted for 46 per cent of the total number receiving benefit payments.

For the first six months of 1977, the payment total has risen by 14 per cent from a year ago to $2.19 billion. The average weekly benefit payment was $100.39, up by nine per cent from 1976.

The number of people who filed claims for benefit payments was down one per cent from May to 199,000.

Fighter jets tenders out

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has issued formal requests for tenders to international aircraft manufacturers for new fighter jets for the Canadian armed forces, the supply and services department announced Wednesday.

The statement said the closing date for manufacturers' proposals is scheduled for early 1978 enabling cabinet consideration by mid 1978.

One-millionth seabus sails

The Burrard Inlet seabus carried its one-millionth passenger this week.

Running for the past 11 weeks between Vancouver and the North Shore the seabus "has exceeded all expectations," Minister of Municipal Affairs Hugh Curtis said Wednesday.

The one-millionth passenger was 18-year-old Ruby Kirk of North Vancouver. She will receive a weekend trip for two to Victoria.

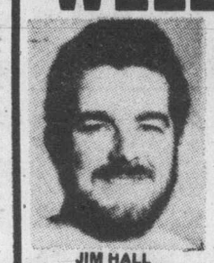

Each seabus carries 500 passengers on the minutes-long cross-harbor run for 35 cents. The two vessels provide a 15-minute service.

Committee urging January freeze

Cass doesn't want Saanich plan delay

Ald. Ian Cass will not be supporting a recommendation by Saanich council's lands, planning and housing committee that public hearings on the draft community plan and major development projects be delayed until January.

The freeze motion is to be debated at a council meeting Tuesday.

Cass, who supported the motion at the committee level, issued a position statement Wednesday to aldermen and Saanich ratepayer groups that he does not intend supporting a recommendation that the committee and council abbrogate their responsibilities for five months.

He said the reason he did not oppose the matter in committee was because he wanted time to consider the implications of such action.

The statement deals in detail with concerns expressed in a public statement two weeks ago by seven Saanich ratepayer groups who joined forces in asking council for a 90-day moratorium on major rezoning and development proposals.

The committee is recommending a 120-day freeze on development, and a public hearing on the official plan.

If ratified, the freeze would halt all rezoning in the municipality.

Dealing with major regional shopping centre proposals at Broadmead and Tillicum, Cass said he was convinced "we do not need two" and was prepared to hear arguments that one was needed.

"You may rest assured there will be no support from me for any hasty or inadequately analysed centres at Broadmead or Tillicum."

He supports the view that expansion of existing facilities in the Tillicum area is required and that, eventually, a retail centre of community size would be needed at Broadmead.

He said no formal applications had yet been submitted to council by either developer.

On another matter, the proposed Minnie Mountain housing development, he said if a proposal for development of the 70 acres went to public hearing essentially unchanged from an earlier proposal, "I do not think I could support it and believe it would fail to obtain the necessary two-thirds majority vote of this council."

Regarding the Royal Oak industrial zone, Cass said the planning committee should have debated the matter earlier this year and made its position clear.

"I believe we have failed to come to grips with the need for a sober, rational and non-political analysis of the issue. Instead, we have had no debate despite several meetings to obtain input from ratepayers and property owners."

Cass contends that the basic question, once emotion and hysteria is removed, is: In long-term planning does Saanich need to provide for additional industrial-commercial zoning and, if so, should it be located in Royal Oak as identified on the regional plan or should a new industrial area be sought?

However, he agreed that redevelopment of land east and west of Douglas north of Tolmie and south of Saanich Road should have priority over the Royal Oak.

Cass said arguments supporting industrial zoning elsewhere than Royal Oak so far had been more emotional than factual.

He said land in the Douglas area would yield less than 100 acres "an inadequate amount for our needs over the next 20 years."

The present plan for Royal Oak would rezone about 100 acres of industrial land, bringing the total commercial-industrial to about two per cent of total municipal area.

"I doubt this could reasonably be called unbalanced zoning for industry," he said.

Over the past few years, Cass said, many Saanich residents had made plans and commitments based in council's expressed intentions and this was a good reason why council should not vacillate on reaching a decision on future industrial development.

Tax revenue from 100 acres of industrial development would be about $1 million annually, he noted.

Apartment conversion future for school?

The Beacon Hill School building will be converted to residential suites if Victoria city council accepts a recommendation of its land management committee.

The committee is recommending the higher of two bids to purchase the property bea ccepted.

Town and Country Realty Ltd. submitted a bid of $86,000 while the James Bay Residents' League offered $1 to acquire the building for community use.

Ald. John Hayes said he was opposed to accepting the Town and Country offer because the price wasn't high enough.

But Ald. Robert Wright said the property had been advertised twice and he believed the top proposal was a fair compromise between the community's stated desire to retain the building and the city receiving "top dollar" for the property.

Seymour-Vernon guidelines sought

Saanich Ald. Ian Cass wants council to give the planning staff guidance on the type of development to be allowed in the Seymour-Vernon area.

He made the suggestion during discussion by council's lands, planning and housing committee Tuesday on a proposal for an apartment-commercial development on Seymour adjacent to the public library branch.

Sarjeet Johal, who has been attempting for a year to obtain an opinion from planning staff on the type of development to be allowed, is proposing to erect a four-storey building housing apartments and retail stores.

Cass, calling for development guidelines to be established, said any development should be incorporated into design of the "civic core" area.

Setting guidelines would, he said, eliminate any possibility of developers suffering undue hardship because of delays in getting projects approved.

Council recently adopted in principle proposals contained in the Seymour-Vernon area study.

Mill leaks gas, worker dies

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Walter Langdon-Davies, 36, of Prince George, died Saturday following an industrial accident Friday night at the Northwood pulp mill here. Fourteen other men were treated for hydrogen sulphide gas inhalation from a gas leak in the mill. Two remained in hospital.

Yellow paint wrong says angry Wright

Yellow paint being slapped on city streets to aid traffic flow has made Ald. Robert Wright see red.

He told Victoria council's traffic committee that the result was far from esthetically pleasing and the policy doesn't seem to make much sense in residential areas where the city is trying to encourage the preservation of heritage homes.

The 'free spirit' with the paintbrush has moved from Hillside to Cook, he complained.

"We're trying to preserve heritage buildings and some of our streets are looking more like the Georgia turnpike."

Wright said his concern was prompted by a recent drive along Cook Street.

Traffic engineer Derek Wild assured aldermen that the painting was necessary.

Aldermen agreed to refer back to the traffic subcommittee a recommendation that a general loading zone be created from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. on the north side of Fort Street near Quadra.

The request came from the consumer and corporate affairs ministry and Sawyer Sewing Centre.

Recommendations endorsed included:

Shelbourne — no stopping between 4 and 6 p.m. between Bay and Myrtle.

Wharf — No stopping on the west side between 4 and 6 p.m. from Yates to Courtney.

Bank — No parking on the west side for 410 feet from Quamichan.

Cook — No stopping on the west side from Pakington to Southgate. Required for right turns onto Southgate to encourage traffic to use the James Bay route.

Following labor relations ruling

Filers back at mills

Vancouver Island sawmills were operating at capacity again Wednesday night after filers returned to the job in accordance with a Labor Relations Board order.

The filers, members of the International Woodworkers of America, set up picket lines in the Duncan-Ladysmith-Nanaimo area Tuesday and booked off sick at two Victoria area mills. The action closed eight sawmills and idled more than 1,500 woodworkers.

It was an unsanctioned move that brought an expression of disappointment from IWA Western Canada president Jack Munro and a cease and desist order from the LRB.

The filers, responsible for the condition of the saws, were bitter over the industry's refusal to grant them special adjustments in recent master contract talks.

Among other things, they wanted a better wage spread for the three filing-room job classifications, but this wasn't included in the tentative agreement reached last Friday for the 30,000 IWA members in the coastal region. Union officials who sympathize with their plight say other factors are also involved and that the complaint dates back to 1974.

The filers have called a special meeting for 1 p.m. today at Nanaimo to discuss the situation and they will get a chance to air their complaints with IWA officials.

One of those who will be there to answer questions is Roger Stanyer, president of the IWA Duncan local. Stanyer, who was part of the union bargaining team, said he doesn't see the meeting as a springboard to further job action.

The filers began their action the day after welders and automotive mechanics returned to the job. The earlier move had disrupted sawmill and plywood mill operations for six days and was also related to a disappointment over negotiations.

The filers' book-off in the area covered by the Victoria local shut down the sawmill at B.C. Forest Products, but had no real effect on Sooke Forest Products.

New roadbed finished around derailed cars

HOPE (CP) — A Canadian National Railways spokesman said Wednesday that work crews had finished laying the roadbed for a bypass track around the wreckage of 86 sulphur cars that derailed Tuesday and caught fire.

Al Menard said the railway, which hopes to resume service on the bypass by midnight Friday, suffered a minimum $1 million damage in the wreck, which forced 25 families of the community of Flood to evacuate their homes to avoid poisonous fumes from the fire.

The blazing sulphur was brought under control about seven hours after the 2.10 p.m. derailment, after aircraft bombed the fire with chemical retardant. There were no injuries among the train's crew.

Cause of the derailment is unknown. The five locomotives remained on the track, but 86 of the 100 cars in the mile-long train folded into a 300-yard crush of twisted metal and sulphur.

Canadian Armed Forces bulldozers and ground crews were credited with ensuring that the fire did not spread to nearby fields.

The train was hauling 6,060 tons of sulphur from Alberta to Vancouver for export.

Hope is 90 miles east of Vancouver and three miles east of Flood.

Menard said CNR trains would be travelling on CP Rail track until the bypass was completed. An investigation was under way.

The Trans-Canada Highway was closed briefly at two points during the height of the blaze, but re-opened soon after the fire was controlled.

Poles may ask to stay

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian immigration officials expect 12 Poles who were arrested this week while working illegally as spice grinders will ask for political asylum.

"One has already asked for refugee status," an immigration spokesman said Wednesday. "We expect the 11 others will follow suit."

The 12 Polish natives were employed at Spice and Botanical Products Ltd., a firm in suburban St. Laurent, and some had been there as long as eight weeks.

Seal hunt protest draws jail term

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Brian Davies, head of the protest group that staged confrontations with Newfoundland seal hunters this year, was jailed Wednesday for 14 days and also ordered to pay a $1,000 fine or spend another six months in jail.

Davies, executive director of the Fredericton-based International Fund For Animal Welfare, was convicted in July of charges of violating federal regulations protecting seal herds off the East Coast.

A penitentiary spokesman here said Davies was "in a cell by himself and would be given prison garb and assigned his duties later."

Davies' cell in the 150-year-old institution is about eight feet by nine feet and contains a small single cot, a toilet and a wash basin. It is located along a corridor containing cells for 112 other prisoners.

RCMP escorted Davies here Wednesday from Deer Lake aboard a commercial airliner. He was sentenced earlier in the day at Woody Point.

Davies had indicated he would appeal the convictions, but an RCMP spokesman said he was unaware of such action.

Average gasoline prices top dollar

OTTAWA (CP) — Government-approved price increases that went into effect earlier this week will push the national average price of a gallon of no-lead gasoline to just more than $1.

A survey carried out for the Canadian Automobile Association shows the national average price for the gasoline used in most late-model automobiles at 97.7 cents a gallon.

But an association official said the survey did not include a 3.2-cent-a-gallon increase that went into effect Tuesday. Oil companies say the increase will be passed on to consumers unless there is tight competition for sales in certain areas.

The increase also will push the price for regular gasoline to more than $1 a gallon in two more eastern provinces.

Addition of the 3.2 cent increase will take the average price to 101.1 cents in Nova Scotia and 101.3 cents in Prince Edward Island.

The price in Newfoundland, which passed the $1 mark earlier, will rise to 103.8 cents.

The association survey showed the average price for no-lead gasoline before the latest increase was: 90.5 cents in Alberta, 98.4 cents in British Columbia, 95 cents in Manitoba, 96.4 cents in New Brunswick, 108.7 cents in Newfoundland, 100.2 cents in Nova Scotia, 94.1 cents in Ontario, 101.4 cents in P.E.I., 96.7 cents in Quebec and 95.7 cents in Saskatchewan.

Highest price for gasoline is in the Yukon, where the survey showed it cost 111.5 cents a gallon for both regular and no-lead.

Core plan changes 'only few'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pat Brady, president of the British Columbia Teachers' Federation, says it now seems that few changes will take place within the schools with introduction of the core curriculum program this fall.

Brady, speaking in an interview Tuesday, said he was pleased with the recently-announced adjustments to the ministry of education's original core curriculum proposal.

"We had serious concerns when the original proposals were announced last November," Brady said. "There was the possibility that every kid was going to be made to learn the same thing. We said 'this can lead to something that would put teachers and students into very rigid little boxes'."

But the guide distributed for use in B.C. schools this September has modified and clarified the original proposal.

Today's global doom quiz: Pick one

The world is warming to death ☐

The world is freezing to death ☐

None of the above ☐

By PAUL DE GROOT
Colonist Reporter

An increase in carbon dioxide in the air caused by industrialization is creating a "greenhouse" effect which will warm Earth, melt the polar ice caps and flood coastal cities.

The increase in cloud cover caused by industrialization will reflect back more of the sun's heat and light, cooling the planet and leading to another ice age. Coastal cities will be pushed into the ocean by massive glaciers.

TAKE your pick of the theories, but neither one of them or their many variations has a solid basis in scientific fact, according to Dr. Joseph Smagorinsky of Princeton University.

Smagorinsky, head of the Geophysical Fluid Dynamics Laboratory at Princeton, is chairman of the Joint Organizing Committee for the First GARP Global Experiment, and in case you haven't guessed already, GARP stands for Global Atmospheric Research Project.

In Victoria this week for a meeting of the JOC executive board and other FGGE officials, Smagorinsky said that climatological research was still in its infancy, since much of the raw data needed to make sound scientific conclusions simply do not exist.

THIS IS evident from the fact that proponents of both the "warmer Earth" and "cooler Earth" theories frequently use the same data, but come to opposite conclusions.

Huge areas of ocean along the equator, in particular, had been virtually untouched by large-scale scientific observation, Smagorinsky said, and weather systems, with long-term ramifications for world climate, are spawned.

There was no question that many human activities had an impact on climate, Smagorinsky said.

THE HEAT generated by cities for instance was one of the myriad "events" that had an impact on the weather. Carbon dioxide from combustion, exhaust from supersonic aircraft, fertilizers, patterns of agriculture, and efforts to seed clouds were others.

"But we still don't know much about carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, and we can't understand it until we understand the system in its natural state. How the natural system responds to these influences can only be known if we know what the natural system itself is."

THE EXPERIMENT was the largest attempt ever made to get a look at the natural system, according to Dr. Bo Doos of the World Meteorological Organization in Geneva.

Doos, as director of GARP activities, has been placed in charge of an effort which will eventually involve 145 nations, 70 of which will conduct investigations during 1979, the experimental year, while the rest will be providing access to meteorological data and other resources which exist already.

AMONG the resources which will be brought to bear are nine satellites — two American and two Russian satellites in orbits which take them across the earth's poles, plus two American, one Japanese, one European and one Russian satellite in "geostatic orbits" which exactly match the speed of the earth's rotation, thus keeping them over one point on the earth's surface.

There will be 30 ships especially engaged in the experiment work, and five air-drop tracks in which aircraft will continually drop measuring devices to record atmospheric conditions on their way back to earth.

SOME 300 balloons will record data in the upper atmosphere at an altitude of 15 kilometres, while at the other extreme, 300 Canadian-built drift buoys will gather information from the ocean surface.

Hundreds of other ships and aircraft of convenience—vessels and planes which normally travel the globe, will be taking measurements for the experiment during their routine passages as part of the data-gathering team.

The cost of this whole effort? It is virutally impossible to pin down, but Smagorinsky says it will be in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

THE AIM of the experiment is to gather that all-important data which could lead to an understanding of how our atmosphere works.

The main data-gathering periods will be January, February, May and June of 1979, two two-month periods which happen to coincide with the Asiatic monsoon.

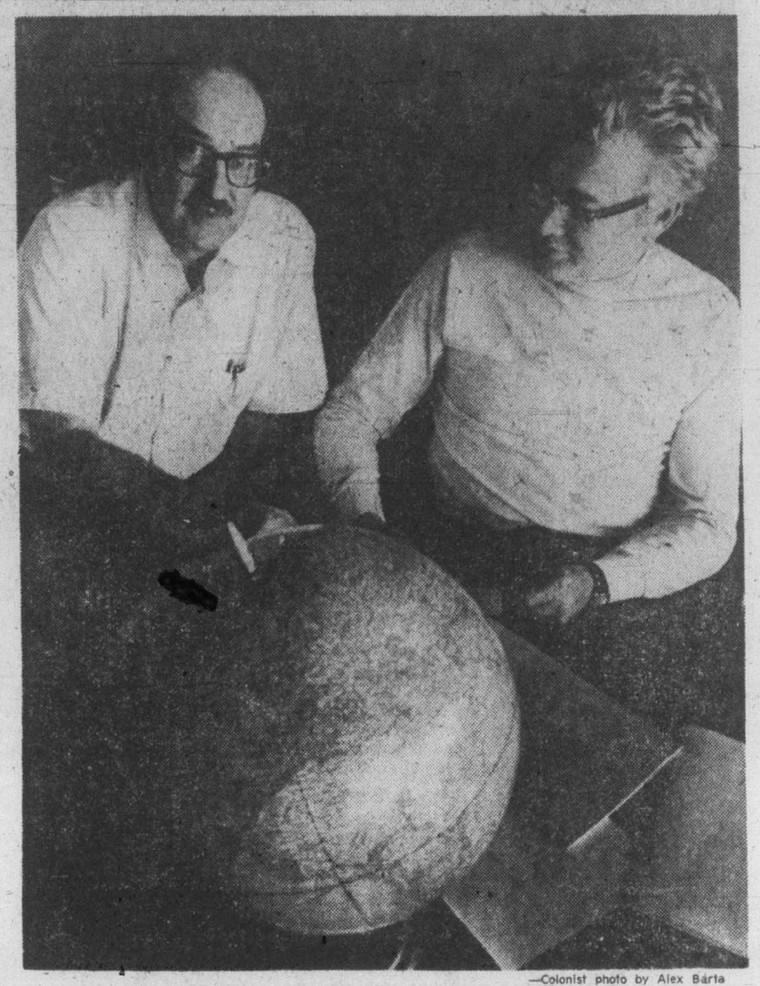

The most intense activity would be concentrated along the equatorial zone, a vast area about which little was known, Smagorinsky said. Regional studies in other areas such as southern Asia and the Caribbean, will supplement the primary effort.

THE DATA from this massive undertaking will be first collected by Swedish and Russian processing centres. Fuller analyses will be done at a European data-processing centre in England, and an American centre at Princeton.

It would be two to three years after the experiment was completed before scientists had their first look at the organized data, and scientists would probably study experiment data for years after that, Smagorinsky said.

With an experiment as large as this one, however, results cannot be expectrd quickly.

IT WAS conceived in 1967, and took organizational shape in 1968. That was before "hard times" in the form of double-digit inflation, the energy crisis, and other afflictions had begun to slice into government and scientific budgets, but the program had remained remarkably intact, probably because governments recognize its importance, Smagorinsky said.

'Soft-core' must be out of children's reach

Barely a ripple felt on new porn law

Don't expect any book-burning today by city police as the province's new guidelines into pornography go into effect.

Chief Jack Gregory said Wednesday that his force had made the guidelines available to distributors who had agreed to co-operate.

Any subsequent charges laid in connection with the new guidelines are unlikely to be indicated by the city police, according to Gregory.

Gregory said his force would first wait for a complaint from the public at which time police obtain evidence and submit it to the prosecutor's office.

Gregory said the guidelines, which set out three categories of pornography and divided it into hard and soft varieties, "... left us with somewhat of a quandary on how to proceed."

He said the Canadian Criminal Code made no differentiation in pornography and recent court rulings had shown it was difficult to make charges stick.

Several years back, an attempt to prosecute a local theatre manager only led to publicity for the movie after the attorney-general's department instructed the prosecutor to enter a stay of proceedings.

The three categories set out by the attorney-general include:

- Category A covers material which links sex with violence, animals and children which "clearly contravenes community standards" and may by subject to prosecution.
- Category B covers hard-core pornography that does not include violence, bestiality and children. This material cannot be displayed or sold to children but may be sold from under the counter to adults.
- Category C includes soft-core pornography which cannot be made available to juveniles.

According to Saanich Inspector Ted Owen this last category likely would include publications such as Playboy, Playgirl or any other showing nudity. He said the municipality's retailers were in the process of being made aware of the new guidelines.

Gregory said there was no "blatant" problem of pornography within the city.

None of the retailers sampled thought they had had any material that would contravene the guidelines of Category A.

A spokesman for the Garden of Eden in Nootka Court doubted the other two sections applied to the store as juveniles were not allowed on the premises.

"If the government allows us to sell it, we'll sell it," said a spokesman for Tommie's News Stand, 561 Fisgard, who was unsure as to how the guidelines would apply.

A spokesman for Palace News, 616 Fort, said the positioning of magazines would be changed in the store and signs designating parts of the stands as adult literature would be posted to conform with the new guidelines on soft pornography.

Uncertain if Victoria affected

PWA fares rising 5%

Canadian Press

Pacific Western Airlines is raising fares an average of five per cent on Sunday, the result of this week's cross-country increase in fuel costs, a company spokesman said in Calgary Wednesday.

But there was no indication whether the hike would apply to PWA's Victoria-Vancouver or Victoria-Seattle flights.

Brian Johnson, a PWA public relations officer, said the increases, based only on the increase in fuel costs, will vary on the airline's runs to 45 communities in Alberta, B.C. and the Northwest Territories.

There will be no increases on some runs, and up to about seven per cent added to the fare for others, he said.

The cost of a one-way flight to Calgary from Edmonton will increase by 2.5 per cent to $30 from $29.15, while the price of a ticket to Kelowna from Edmonton will jump five per cent to $65.

Max Ward of Edmonton, president of Wardair, said the fuel price increases would not affect charter airlines fares.

"We knew about the increases a long time ago and allowed for that in our fares," he said. "It has come out just about where we anticipated."

Land-use problems 'political'

Canadian Press

The B.C. Federation of Agriculture said Wednesday it was shocked by amendments to the Land Commission Act introduced Tuesday in the Legislature.

"We don't want to see our agricultural land-use problems being resolved in the political arena," federation president Ralph Barichello said in a news release, "and that is exactly what is going to happen if the provincial cabinet is given the power to overrule decisions of the land commission."

Under the amendments introduced by Environment Minister James Nielsen, the cabinet's environmental land use committee would be able to consider appeals rejected by the commission.

In the current system, an appellant first must gain the approval of the commissioners before the matter can be taken to the cabinet, but this is being done away with.

Barichello said the move reflected an increasingly inconsistent attitude of the government toward problems of the agricultural community.

Barichello also recommended that the agricultural land reserve be taken out of the hands of the environment ministry, and given to the agriculture ministry.

It's-better-in-Victoria lure for neighbors

Canadian Press

Victoria, with the help of the provincial government, is planning to launch a tourist campaign designed to lure Vancouver and Seattle residents to the capital city, the visitors' information centre said Wednesday.

The project will involve full-page advertisements in Vancouver and Seattle newspapers, offering discounts on a wide variety of hotels, restaurants, stores and tourist attractions.

The advertising campaign begins in November in Vancouver.

The travel industry ministry will pay all costs of initial advertising and the project will be co-ordinated by the information centre.

Don Nixon, centre manager, said the promotion could attract large numbers of tourists during the off-season. The discounts would be available from Nov. 1 to Dec. 15.

The same advertising campaign is planned for early spring in Seattle after the Vancouver plan is reviewed, said Nixon, adding that any further advertising campaigns would have to be funded by the centre.

B.C. urged to stay out of Vancouver labor fuss

Organized labor in Victoria wants the provincial government — and the opposition — to stay out of the internal battle of a big Teamsters Union local in Vancouver.

Fearing legislation that they believe would interfere with union affairs, some local labor leaders are expressing displeasure with statements made by both Labor Minister Allan Williams and William King, labor minister in the former NDP government.

"There has been a lot of concern expressed about the statements of Williams and King. Our feeling is that the trade unions are quite able to look after their own affairs in a democratic way," said John Schibli, president of the Victoria Labor Council.

Labor's concern stems from statements that were made in the Legislature Monday about a battle and "trial" within Local 213 of the Teamsters.

King (Revelstoke - Slocan) wanted to know if Williams would use the authority of his office to force the Teamsters to open the closed-door trial of Jack Vlahovic to rank-and-file members of the local.

Vlahovic is accused of spending $8,000 in union funds to hire business agents without proper authority. The appointments were rescinded.

In return, Vlahovic — secretary-treasurer of the local — is taking court action against four executive members including Senator Ed Lawson, top Teamster official in Canada.

Rank-and-filers have carried on a protest outside the Teamster offices after finding they were not allowed into the trial.

AirWest strike possible by end of month—union

A Teamsters Union official said Wednesday employees of AirWest Airlines Ltd. might be in a position to strike by the middle of this month as a result of a breakdown in conciliation talks.

Business agent Wes Anderson said federal conciliation officer Jack Chapman had returned to his Winnipeg home overnight Tuesday because of the refusal of the Teamsters to take part in extended talks.

The union charged Chapman was unnecessarily prolonging the bargaining procedure by extending the original time period for the talks.

Anderson denied a radio report that the pilots and other employees had ended their prolonged "study session" and returned to the job with the airline.

"There are only about 10 who went back and they went back over the last month. There are still bout 70 out," he said.

Some three pilots were among those who returned; while another 30 pilots remained off the job, he said.

The airline has continued to operate with some difficulty since the "study session" began at the end of July in response to the firing of a co-pilot. Management personnel have flown the planes on their routes between Victoria, Vancouver, Nanaimo, Seattle and other points.

Any strike that would result now would be over the failure to come to terms on a new collective agreement. The firing of the co-pilot was a separate issue.

Anderson said Chapman, a lawyer, had been unsuccessful in bringing the sides closer. His attempt to extend talks this week brought a union boycott. Teamsters also picketed the Vancouver hotel in which he was staying.

The dispute involves some 95 employees.

Police board stubs foot patrols

Foot patrols in residential areas of the city have been rejected as impracticable by the Victoria police board.

Although agreeing to leave the matter open for further discussion, board members were of the opinion that having policemen walking beats would be a less efficient method of combatting crime than the present system of two-man cruisers.

Victoria MLA Charles Barber (NDP) and board member Phillip Fawcett are among those who have urged reintroduction of foot patrols.

Fawcett, in a letter to the board, said that in his five years on the board he has become "increasingly persuaded of the need for, and value of, community policing in Victoria."

He suggested establishing a committee with representatives from the board, police administration, constables and the community with the object of establishing an experimental community policing program in one city neighborhood.

But board chairman Mayor Michael Young said he doubted such a scheme would be practicable.

It's all in the way you hold your mouth

Fourth-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina bites on his tongue as he goes after a shot during opening-day match in U.S. Open tennis championships. Vilas had little trouble of disposing of Manuel Santana of Spain as he recorded his seventh straight victory in tournament play. (Story elsewhere on this page.)

Slimmest of margins gives Burrards title

VANCOUVER — Victoria Shamrocks gave it all they had Wednesday night but so did Vancouver Burrards and the Mainlanders won the honor of representing the West in the Mann Cup.

Rallying in the third period for the third straight game, the Burrards denied the Shamrocks their first Mann Cup final berth in 20 years by scoring a 12-11 triumph before a standing-room only crowd of 2,975 at Kerrisdale Arena.

Vancouver won the last three games to take the best-of-seven series, 4-3, and will host Brampton Excelsiors in the best-of-seven national championship which starts Saturday at Kerrisdale.

Either team would have been a deserving winner of the WLA final which was one of the closest and most exciting in league history.

In the first six games only one goal separated the teams with Victoria scoring 61 goals to Vancouver's 60. The Shamrocks won the opener 11-10, the second game, 10-9 and the fourth game 11-9. Vancouver took the third game 9-8, the fifth game 12-11 and the sixth game 11-10.

Each game was a thriller featuring brilliant goaltending and shooting and outstanding defensive play. The seventh game was no exception.

Vancouver held early leads of 1-0 and 2-1 but Dave Thomson tied it at 2-2 with a 30-foot scoring shot at 6:20 of the first period and the Burrards weren't to lead again until Rico Bellusci scored late in the third period to make it 11-10.

The Shamrocks got a great opportunity to force overtime when the Burrards' Ron Pinder was penalized with 1:57 remaining but they couldn't beat goalkeeper Dave Evans, who was named the outstanding player in the series, and with 42 seconds remaining took a penalty for having too many men on the floor to lose the advantage.

With about 20 seconds remaining Dave Tasker, who scored four goals for a total of nine in the last two games, scored on a delayed penalty to seemingly seal the victory. But Victoria wouldn't quit and Ron MacNeil scored with eight seconds remaining. Norm Baker won the ensuing faceoff but the Shamrocks couldn't get a decent shot in the time remaining.

Evans made 42 saves and Larry Smeltzer was equally sharp in the Victoria net, making 41 saves, and both were helped by the goalposts as each team hit the piping on numerous occasions.

Victoria lead 5-2 after one period and was up by 8-4 midway through the second period but Pat Ryan and Pinder scored on Shamrock defensive lapses to make it 8-6 after two periods.

Ryan scored at 9:56 of the third period to tie it at 9-9 and Victoria gained the lead for the last time when Dan Green scored 13 seconds later.

Steve Buckley, recruited from the junior "A" Victoria McDonalds, led the Irish with three goals while Baker, Ivan Thompson, who scored the only shorthanded goal of the contest, MacNeil, Green, Thomson, Joe McCrea and Mike Beaulac counted singles.

As through the entire series there were few altercations in the game and both teams took 19 minutes in penalties and counted one powerplay goal each.

The Shamrocks, several of whom hoped to play in the Mann Cup and then retire, took defeat hard and after the game a few who were unhappy with some of the officiating verbally accosted referee Ron Masson.

The Burrards, who last played in the Mann Cup in 1975, have now beaten the long-suffering Shamrocks in four straight playoff series. Last year they upset the league champion Shamrocks in seven games in the semi-finals, winning the deciding game by one goal.

Nettles and Lyle shine as Yankees extend lead

Some familiar names are keeping New York Yankees on top in the American League East.

Graig Nettles slammed a one-out home run in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Yankees a 5-4 victory over Seattle Mariners Wednesday night. It was the slugging third baseman's second homer of the game and moved the defending AL home-run champ into the league lead with 34.

Sparky Lyle, 12-4, gained the win for the third consecutive game as New York won its 20th game of its last 24. The Yankees lead second-place Baltimore Orioles and Boston Red Sox by four games.

The Orioles completed a three-game series sweep over California Angels, nipping Frank Tanana 4-3 to move into the tie with Boston.

Jim Norris drove in the tie-breaking run with a pinch double in the ninth inning as Cleveland Indians edged the Red Sox, 4-3. Boston and Baltimore have 75-55 records.

Kansas City increased its Western Divison lead to two and one-half games over the idle Chicago White Sox with a 5-4 win over Texas Rangers as Fred Patek drilled a tie-breaking double in the sixth inning.

The Royals are now three games ahead of Minnesota Twins, who lost 4-3 to Oakland A's, and three-and-one-half games in front of the Rangers.

Wayne Gross slammed his first home run in almost six weeks while Doc Medich and Doug Bair checked the Twins on six hits as the resurgent A's gained the win.

In the National League, Philadelphia Phillies moved five games in front of Pittsburgh Pirates in the Eastern Division, as Steve Carlton pitched an eight-hitter for his 19th victory of the season to defeat Atlanta Braves 6-1.

The Pirates, meanwhile, fell to San Francisco Giants for the 10th time in 12 meetings this year, as Darrell Evans slammed four hits, including a three-run homer, and Jim Barr pitched an eight-hitter to win 6-3.

Tom Seaver limited Montreal Expos to three hits and Joe Morgan clouted his 21st home run as Cincinnati Reds blanked the Expos, 6-0.

Despite the victory, the Reds couldn't narrow the gap between themselves and the Dodgers in the Western Division. Los Angeles blanked Chicago Cubs 5-0 as Rick Rhoden combined with two relievers for the shutout.

The first-place Dodgers are still eight and one-half games in front of the Reds.

Calgary club rallies to surprise Bates

Victoria Bates suffered a major setback Wednesday in their bid for a third straight Canadian senior men's fastball championship at Hull, Quebec.

Calgary Adanacks scored three runs in the seventh inning to edge the defending champions 3-2 in a Blue Division round-robin elimination game.

It was the first loss in three years in Canadian championship play for Bates and it left them 2-1 and with two games remaining. Bates have today off but play Nova Scotia and Quebec Friday.

The Bates games Friday will be broadcast on radio station CJVI at 6 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Nova Scotia had been considered Victoria's toughest opposition in the Blue Division but after scoring a 3-2 win over Quebec Wednesday the Nova Scotia team was upset by New Brunswick, 2-1.

Quebec was virtually eliminated from the chase for one of the two playoff berths in the division when it dropped a 4-1 decision to Prince Edward Island.

Bates jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning but Calgary came up with five singles in the seventh to score the three runs. Dave Ruthowsky, took the loss in his first start of the tournament. He gave up four singles and a fielders' choice before giving way to Andy Konopacki who was tagged for the game-winning hit.

Jim McMillan started Bates early rally with a single and went to third when Carl Walker doubled. The Adanacks decided to intentionally walk Bob Burrows, who hit three home runs Tuesday, but were called for an illegal pitch that brought McMillan home. They then pitched to Burrows and he hit a run-scoring single.

Whitey Haley went the distance to earn the win for Alberta.

Bates, who easily handled all but the strongest teams in the last two national tournaments, struggled past lightly regarded Prince Edward island, 1-0, and New Brunswick, 4-3, Tuesday.

And the Colonist learned Wednesday that Stan Kern didn't make the trip with the club.

Kern was reported to have practised with Bates before they left and was expected to meet the team at the airport Monday morning to fly to Hull. But Kern, known to be a less-than-avid air traveller, didn't show.

Kern, who drove to the championships in the East in previous years, was reported to be out of town and was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Calgary leads the Blue Division with a 3-0 record while Manitoba and Ontario and the host Hull Volants are all 2-0 in Red Division and Saskatoon is 1-0.

The top two teams in each division advance to the double-knockout playoffs.

Ramirez, Cox upset as U.S. Open starts

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (Reuter) — Raul Ramirez and Mark Cox slithered to defeat Wednesday as the United States Open tennis championships opened with heavy rain and mixed fortunes for the seeded players on view.

Ramirez, the sixth seed from Mexico, was humbled by a little-known Ecuadorian, Ricardo Ycaza, 6-3, 6-2, while Cox, the 13th seed from Britain, was ousted 7-6, 7-6 by Butch Walts, a burly, powerful American.

No. 12 seed Harold Solomon of the U.S. also had his problems before overcoming South African Bernie Mitton 3-6, 6-3, 7-5. But fourth-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and fiery Romanian Ilie Nastase, ranked 11th, had little more than a workout.

Vilas disposed of 1965 champion Manuel Santana of Spain 6-1, 6-0, while Nastase, who won the 1972 title, cruised past South Africa's Frew McMillan without dropping a game.

In night action, 42-year-old Ken Rosewall of Australia, who last appeared at Forest Hills in 1974 and first played this tournament in 1952, easily beat Tim Gullikson of Dayton, Ohio, 6-0, 6-4.

And in a battle of 18-year-olds, John McEnroe of Douglaston, N.Y. beat Elliot Teltscher of Palos Verdes, Calif. 6-1, 6-3 in a match marred by disputes over line calls and in which McEnroe lost one point because of a "conduct penalty" imposed by the umpire.

Willem Prinsloo regained a little prestige for South Africa when he eliminated Jeff Borowiak, winner of the Canadian Open, 3-6, 7-6, 6-1.

Phil Dent, one of the most prominent Australians in the competition, breezed past American Keith Richardson 6-4, 6-4, and New Zealander Onny Parun, who had to pull out last year when injuring his back in the first game against Nastase, fared better this year, knocking out Javier Soler of Spain 6-2, 6-4.

This year it is defending champion Jimmy Connors who has the back trouble.

One doctor has been quoted as saying the 24-year-old power-house American would be foolish to play this year, the last time the tournament will be held at Forest Hills before moving to the nearby Flushing Meadow facility.

But Connors, the second seed, has said he will play anyway.

The other ailing star, top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden, is receiving treatment for a strained chest muscle. Both Wimbledon champion Borg and Connors were excused from playing Wednesday to give them more time to recover.

Cards trade relief pitcher

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals announced Wednesday night the trade of right-handed relief pitcher Clay Carroll to Chicago White Sox for a player to be named later.

The 36-year-old Carroll, a veteran of 15 major league seasons, was acquired by the Cardinals last March from the White Sox in exchange for right-handed reliever Larrin LaGrow. Carroll's record in 39 games for St. Louis was 4-2, with an earned run average of 2.40.

Capital captures Heywood crown

Capital Builders scored three runs in the first inning Wednesday night, then erupted for three more in the seventh to defeat Castle Properties 8-6 and capture the Heywood Avenue Men's Softball League playoff title.

Six Castle errors contributed to Capital's win in the fifth and deciding series game at Heywood Park, with three coming in the first inning. The winners made five errors.

Castle retaliated with two runs in each of the first two innings, as John Cocciolonl and Theo Van DenBurgh tagged bases-empty homers, and hung on to a one-run lead when each club tallied in the fourth inning.

Consecutive singles by John Thompson, Barry Milne, Vic Gee and Al McDonald in the seventh iced the Capital victory.

Dave Hughes gained credit for the win, striking out two, walking none and yielding six hits. Only two of the runs he allowed were earned.

Starter John Barnes took the loss and was relieved by Lorne Bowden after the seventh-inning damage was done.

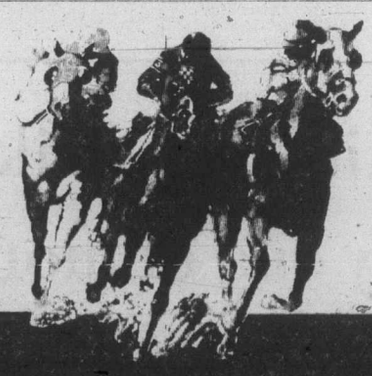

McDonald had two hits for the winners, including one RBI, while Coccionloni's pair of hits paced Castle. Barnes drove in two runs for the losers.

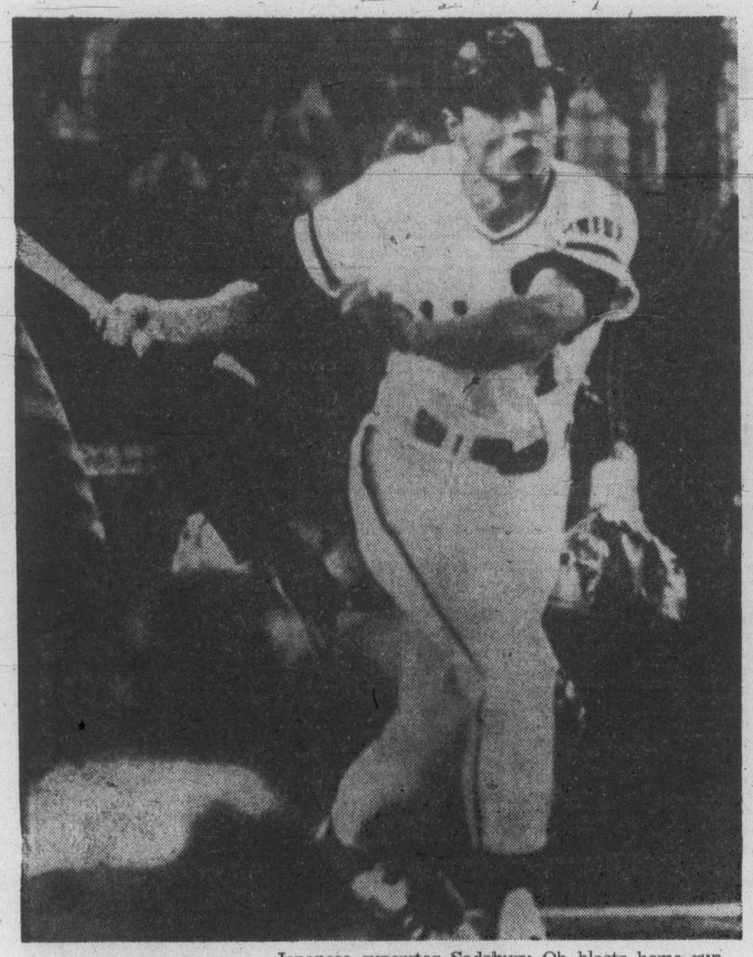

Bob Richdale of Remco Office Supply won the league's most valuable player trophy in presentations earlier this week. Barnes was top pitcher, while Kevin Gilbert of Century Inn led the league in hitting.

Paul Baines of Remco was the most sportsmanlike player and Marv Carver of Capital Builders won the Bud Dalziel trophy for outstanding service to the league.

Lions blow early advantage then snatch dramatic victory

OTTAWA (CP) — Veteran Jim Young, with no time left on the clock, caught a 16-yard pass from quarterback Jerry Tagge Wednesday night to give British Columbia Lions a 27-24 victory over Ottawa Rough Riders in the Canadian football League.

In one of the wildest finishes in many seasons at Lansdowne Park and with Ottawa appearing to be on the way to an undeserved win.

Additional sport Pages 14 and 15

Tagge led the Lions down field with pinpoint passing and climaxed it all with the shot to Young, who stood just inside the Ottawa goal line.

The win pushed the Lions' margin to four points atop the Western Conference standings. Ottawa remained mired in a second-place tie in the East with Toronto Argonauts and Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

The Lions held the lead through most of the game but surrendered it late in the fourth quarter after linebacker Mike Widger intercepted a Tagge throw and stepped into the Lion end zone giving the Riders a 24-20 lead.

The Riders appeared content in the dying seconds to hold the Lions to short pass gains and Tagge completed two short passes before connecting with Young.

Terry Bailey combined with Tagge for a 19-yard touchdown and Jim Harrison ran 14 yards for B.C.'s other touchdowns. Lui Passaglia converted the three touchdowns and added two field goals.

Ottawa quarterback Tom Clements threw touchdown passes to Jeff Avery and Jim Foley for the other two Ottawa touchdowns. His throw to Avery was 51 yards. Foley caught a 10-yarder.

Gerry Organ converted the Ottawa touchdowns and added a 20-yard field goal.

There were 27,248 fans on hand.

The Riders wasted a number of scoring chances on five turnovers—four fumbles, two by running-back Richard Holmes, and an interception.

Next games — Sept. 5: Ottawa at Hamilton; Winnipeg at Saskatchewan; Edmonton at Calgary.

Holmes, whose two fumbles cost Ottawa dearly, got 51 yards on 12 carries as Ottawa rushed for a game total of 121 yards.

B.C.'s total game yardage was 344 while Ottawa managed 386.

Passaglia regained the lead in the Western Conference scoring race with his nine points raising his total to 79. Dave Cutler of Edmonton Eskimos had taken the lead from Passaglia on Tuesday with an eight-point effort against Montreal Alouettes.

B.C. headcoach Vic Rapp was elated with the club's sixth victory in eight games this season and praised his club for not quitting. He said Tagge called a bad play on the Widger touchdown and came back as if nothing had happened.

The Rider coaching staff was upset over the lack of consistancy shown by the team.

Bob O'Billovich, the Riders defensive coach was philosophical about the way his team lost.

"We did it last year in the Grey Cup," he said, referring to Ottawa beating Edmonton Eskimos on the last play of the 1976 national final.

World side loses in rugby match

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — South Africa's Western Province rugby team beat the international world XV at Newlands field 56-26 in convincing style Wednesday.

Putting up its highest score ever against a visiting team, Western Province got six goals and five tries, against the visitors three goals and two tries.

In an earlier game, Western Province B team beat the President's XV, the second visiting team, 43-29.

The international teams included players from six countries—France, New Zealand, Australia, Argentina, Wales and Ireland.

Despite the political overtones of the game—the participation of foreign nationals in a sports contest in South Africa has drawn strong protests by African states and sporting bodies critical of the country's racial policies—the matches went off without serious problems.

City golfer, mates keep senior titles

WINNIPEG (CP) — Margaret Todd of Victoria won the Canadian Senior Ladies' golf championship Wednesday for the second year in a row.

Playing through a steady rain, Mrs. Todd carded a final-round 89 for a two-round total of 172, leading the field by four strokes.

Margaret Bishop of New Minas, N.S. won a playoff for second place after she finished in a tie with Kay Helleur of Toronto at 176.

Anne Tachan of Winnipeg finished fourth at 177.

British Columbia easily won the team title with a 532 total, leading second-place Ontario by 16 strokes. Manitoba was third with 553.

Joan Lawson followed Mrs. Todd among her team-mates with a 179 total, while Colleen McCulloch totalled 181 and Jean Stewart 192.

Alberta was fourth among teams with a 559 total, followed by Nova Scotia (60); Quebec (560); New Brunswick (590); Saskatchewan (592); Prince Edward Island (628) and Newfoundland (640).

The rain filled traps with water and flooded some greens at the Elmhurst Golf and Country Club.

Mrs. Todd, who led the field of 72 golfers in the first day of play with an 83, said she was pleased to retain the title but was not happy with her play on the final 18 holes.

"The weather made it tough to play," said Todd, who has taken part in all the senior championships since the competition began in 1970.

"Some of the greens had casual water which made it tough to play. And then, the club grips were soaking wet. Still, it's nice to win, even if I didn't play very well."

In the battle for second spot, Bishop sank an eight-foot putt for a par on the first playoff hole to give her the edge over Helleur.

Mrs. Todd was captain of the British Columbia team, which included Joan Lawson of Victoria, Colleen McCullough of Vancouver and Jean Stewart of Richmond. Last year, B.C. also won the team title.

Cougars will fight to get Lucas back

Danny Lucas arrived in Sault Ste. Marie Wednesday and is reported to be planning on playing for the Sault Ste. Marie Greyhounds of the Ontario Hockey Association Major Junior Series.

The 19-year-old Powell River native played for University of British Columbia Thunderbirds last year but was expected to return to Victoria Cougars of the Western Canada League this season.

Lucas scored 57 goals and totalled 113 points in his sophomore season with the Cougars in 1974 but he quit the team midway through the next season because of a dispute with coach Pat Ginnell.

Owner-coach Ginnell is gone and new coach Jack Shupe had met twice with Lucas and indications were that the six-foot-one, 190-pound winger was interested in returning to the Cougars.

The news that Lucas was in Sault Ste. Marie came as a shock to the Cougar office Wednesday. Shupe was unavailable but Cougar general manager Bob Briscoe said, "Lucas certainly didn't indicate to us that he was going to play in Sault Ste. Marie."

Briscoe said that the Cougars still hold Lucas' rights and that under an agreement between the three major junior leagues, OHA, Quebec and the WCHL, a player can't jump leagues.

Briscoe said that the Cougars will block any attempts by Lucas to play in the OHA.

"Apparently he's going to university there but he can't play for Sault Ste. Marie. They're members of the CAHA (Canadian Amateur Hockey Association) and can't sign a player from another league," said Briscoe.

Lucas, who played for Greyhound coach Muzz McPherson in Saskatchewan before joining the Cougars in 1973, is reported to be taking a drafting course at Sault Ste. Marie College.

WCHL president Ed Chynoweth was unavailable but Briscoe said he would contact him today and that Chynoweth would discuss the situation with OHA president Tubby Schmaltz.

As far as Briscoe is concerned there is no way Lucas can play in the OHA.

Ginnell lost out in a similar situation two years ago when he attempted to sign a player from the Ontario League.

City sailers to compete in U.S. race

Yachts from Victoria, Surrey, Vancouver, Seattle, Tacoma and Bellingham will compete in the Pacific International Ton Championships (PITCH) at Bellingham Sept. 2-4.

Sponsored by the Bellingham Yacht Club, the world's largest ton regatta will feature races in five divisions, including one-ton, two-ton, three-quarter ton, half-ton and quarter-ton.

Among Victoria entries is Distant Drummer, a 33-footer in the one-ton division owned by Greg Oliver.

Dave files suit for ball return

MIAMI (AP) — What can a golfer do when he can't prove his hole-in-one?

David Freedman filed a claim in Dade County circuit court, demanding return of his ball and scorecard and delivery of the trophy he expected from the county-owned Key Biscayne Country Club. The county was named as the defendant.

"After much aggravation, numerous telephone calls, wasted time, and humiliation at not being able to substantiate to others my claim of a hole-in-one because of the absence of a ball, scorecard and trophy, I have concluded that the county has lost my property," said Freedman, a Miami lawyer.

The former club manager, Maurice Gascione, said he thinks he left Freedman's ball and scorecard in his car and will try to find them.

Asked how they were misplaced, Gascione said: "It certainly wasn't deliberate. I'm a golfer, too."

U.S. rival tops Thompson

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Bill Thompson of Victoria lost 6 and 5 to E. F. Burt of Paradise Valley, Ariz., Wednesday as play continued in the 18th world senior golf championships.

Meanwhile, defending champion Robert Willits of Kansas City was eliminated, losing 5 and 4 to John Anderson of Sweden in the quarter-finals over the par-72, 6,555-yard Broadmoor East course.

Frank Hardison of Laguna Beach, Calif., defeated Torsten Lindman of Sweden two-up to advance to the semi-final round and Jaime Vergara of Chile ousted Lewis Leis of Pacific Palisades, Calif., one-up on the 20th hole.

Kings want Stemkowski

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League announced Wednesday they have acquired from New York Rangers the rights to negotiate with veteran centre Pete Stemkowski.

The Kings said only that "future considerations" were involved and that Stemkowski had not yet signed with the Los Angeles club.

A six-foot-one, 210-pounder, the 34-year-old Stemkowski would provide the Kings with a big centre-ice performer to complement the three smaller centres, Marcel Dionne, Butch Goring and Vic Venasky.

"Peter has good size which we needed and is one of the best faceoff men in the NHL," said general manager George Maguire.

"He's a good defensive player who's an excellent penalty killer."

Stingers sign Marotte

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Stingers of the World Hockey Association announced Wednesday the signing of veteran defenceman Gilles Marotte to a one-year contract.

The five-foot nine, 195-pound Marotte, who joined the National Hockey League Boston Bruins in 1965, was a key figure in the Phil Esposito trade that saw Marotte, Pit Martin and Jack Norris go to Chicago Black Hawks in exchange for Esposito, Ken Hodge and Fred Stanfield.

After 2½ years with Chicago, Marotte was traded to Los Angeles, and then in the middle of the 1973-74 season, he went to New York Rangers.

He played with New York for 2½ years before moving to St. Louis Blues at the beginning of last year. He divided his time last year between the Blues and their Kansas City farm club in the Central Hockey League.

Breakers open first camp

SEATTLE (AP) — Seattle Breakers of the Western Canada Hockey League, the city's newest sports franchise, has opened its first training camp in Kamloops.

More than 100 players reported to camp Tuesday to try out for 20 spots on the parent team's roster. The next 20 players will be assigned to the Breakers' top farm team, the Kamloops Chiefs.

The Breakers will open regular season play Sept. 25 at New Westminster. Their first home game is Sept. 30 against Portland Winter Hawks.

Last season, the franchise finished second in the Western Division.

The Breakers will be coached by Les Calder, who served the past three years as assistant coach and head scout of the San Diego Mariners of the World Hockey Association.

Cowan wins U.S. opener

CANADIAN Gary Cowan of Kitchener, a former winner of the event, eased to a 6 and 4 win over Jay Vincent of the U.S. Wednesday in the opening round of the U.S. amateur golf championships. Defending champion Bill Sander survived a sudden-death hole to get by Radford Yaun while Mike Toomey, a little-known amateur from Maryland, upset U.S. Walker Cupper Vance Heafner. . . . Teofilo Stevenson, a two-time Olympic Heavyweight boxing champion from Cuba, was listed in poor condition in hospital in Havana after suffering burns when a stove exploded in his home. The 25-year-old Stevenson was the gold medal winner in Munich in 1972 and Montreal last year . . . Veteran outfielder Dwight Evans of Boston Red Sox underwent surgery to repair torn cartilage in his right knee. He was injuured in a June 1 game against Texas Rangers and aggravated the conditions three weeks later in Baltimore but tried to play until placed on the disabled list last week.

Cleveland Barons of the NHL have signed right-winger Bob Murdoch to a long-term contract. The 23-year-old Cranbrook native had been a free agent since the end of last season.

Grote traded

HOUSTON (AP) — New York Mets traded catcher Jerry Grote to Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday for an undisclosed amount of cash and two minor league players to be named later. Grote, 34, batted .270 for the Mets in 42 games this season.

Dream mile showdown set for Empire Stadium

NEW YORK (AP) — The long-anticipated dream mile showdown race between Filbert Bayi of Tanzania and John Walker of New Zealand is set for Sept 17 in an international track and field meet at Empire Stadium in Vancouver.

Dan Shedrick, president of Telesports International, the television packager of the event, made the announcement Wednesday at a news conference.

The race, which has been approved by the athletic associations of both Tanzania and New Zealand, will be telecast live on ABC's Wide World of Sports between 2 and 3:30 p.m.

Bayi and Walker will face six other world-class runners in one of the best mile fields ever assembled. The race will be run under international rules during the Vancouver international track and field meet.

The meet is sanctioned by the Canadian Track and Field Association and the British Columbia Track and Field Association.

The race will be run on a tartan track in 30,000-seat Empire Stadium.

Other runners in the mile field will be Mike Boit of Kenya, Dave Hill of Montreal, Steve Ovett of Britain, Wilson Waigwa of Kenya, Thomas Wessinghage of West Germany and Steve Scott of the United States.

Shedrick said, "The Dream Mile is the culmination of three years of intense negotiations to get Bayi and Walker together."

The meeting, Shedrick said, has been approved by Rafael Kubaga, chairman of the Tanzanian Amateur Athletic Association, and Graham Davy of the New Zealand Amateur Athletic Association.

Bayi, 24, set the world record for 1,500 metres at three minutes, 32.2 seconds. The 25-year-old Walker is the mile record holder at 3:49.4. Bayi's 1500-metre standard is equivalent to a 3:49.2 mile.

Bayi's 1500-metre record was set in the Commonwealth Games in Christchurch, New Zealand, on Feb. 2, 1974. Walker established the mile mark in Goteborg, Sweden, on Aug. 12, 1975.

The two last met in the 1974 Commonwealth Games, where Bayi set the 1500-metre record in an exciting race, finishing just ahead of Walker.

They were unable to compete in the Montreal Olympics due to the African boycott. Bayi did not run as several African countries withdrew in protest of New Zealand relations with South Africa. Walker won the 1,500 at the Summer Games in 3:39.17.

Subsequent attempts failed to being them together. A breakthrough in the negotiations was achieved last week and Tanzanian officials agreed to let Bayi run against Walker.

The breakthrough came after the announcement that African countries would compete this weekend in the World Cup Meet at Duesseldorf, West Germany. Bayi, training in Africa, won't compete in this meet. Walker is entered.

The Bayi-Walker confrontation is expected to produce the most dramatic mile since John Landy and Roger Bannister raced in the Miracle Mile, won by Bannister, in the same Empire Stadium during the 1954 British Empire Games.

Debbie, Joyce in Duesseldorf

DUESSELDORF, West Germany (AP) — Stan Huntsman, coach of the United States team, predicted Wednesday that crack European squads would provide the strongest opposition in the inaugural World Cup track and field meet.

"I pick East Germany and Europe III as the most dangerous teams," Huntsman said. "But West Germany could be there, too.

"We have just about the best U.S. team available, but it's going to be tough."

The meet runs from Friday through Sunday and will feature probably the most concentrated assembly of talent in track and field history.

Two trophies — one for men and one for women — will be contested by eight teams.

The teams are: The U.S.; The Americas—the rest of the American continent, featuring Cuban stars Alberto Juantorena and Alejandro Casanas, and the top Caribbean sprinters, and a number of Canadian athletes; East Germany, the European champion; West Germany, European runner-up; Europe III—a selection from the rest of Europe; Africa; Asia, and Oceana, including Australia and New Zealand.

Each team will have one competitor in each event.

Representing Canada will be: Lucette Moreau of Montreal, shot put and discus; Bruno Pauletto of Montreal, shot put; Dave Hill of Montreal, 1,500 metres; Penny Werthner of Ottawa, 1,500 metres; Joanne McLeod of Toronto, 100-metre hurdles; Cole Doty of Toronto, sprint relay; Brian Saunders of Toronto, 1,600-metre relay; Debbie Brill of Haney, high jump; Debbie Scott of Victoria, 3,000 metres; Scott Neilson of New Westminster, hammer throw; Patty Loverock of Vancouver, spring relay; Joyce Yakubowich, Victoria, spring relay; and Marjorie Bailey of Vancouver, sprint relay.

Camera snoops on Perry

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A Kansas City Royals' coach put photographer Ray Corey of the Kansas City Star up to it.

It result was three pictures of Gaylord Perry, 38-year-old pitcher of Texas Rangers, in some curious but not necessarily inexplicable manipulations in the American League baseball team's dugout Tuesday night.

Texas beat Kansas City 8-2 and Perry retired 24 of the last 26 batters he faced. They showed Perry probably was sometimes putting grease on the ball before he threw it.

One of Corey's pictures was of Perry's lap as he sat between team-mates in the dugout, his right leg folded so the right foot was cocked on top of the left knee. There was a towel piled along the inside of the right leg. His hands were in his lap, and in them could be seen one end of a cylindrical object.

In a blowup, it looked about the size of a shotgun shell. A nasal inhaler? Petroleum jelly?

In the second picture, Gaylord had turned his head to the left and was seen in profile sitting on the bench. The towel was in his right hand, which he was holding up beside his right ear. His left arm was reaching toward the right ear, but the hand was hidden by the towel.

Was he wiping away sweat? His ear itching? Was he making a grease deposit?

The third picture showed Perry full length, standing on the mound waiting to make the next pitch. His right hand was on his right jaw with fingers lying up behind the right ear.

Toothache? Making a withdrawal?

"Everybody knows what he does," said Whitey Herzog, manager of the Royals. "But I don't want to get into any hassles. He pitched well. He's a good competitor. I used to get excited about it . . . running out to the mound and all. Now I just tell 'em to hit the dry side of the ball."

The Royals cuffed Perry around a bit in the first two innings and he had an explanation: Too much on the ball.

"The ball was moving too much, so I had to adjust . . . move my target over. It was just too strong, maybe what you call overthrowing. I knew I had good stuff 'cause the ball was moving. I had good enough stuff so that when I walked guys it didn't scare me. When the ball is moving well you aren't concerned about them getting good wood on it consistently. I had super stuff-curve, hard slider, fast ball. All my stuff."

One union seen for all athletes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The marriage of the National Football League Players' Association to the North American soccer League may be the beginning of a union for all professional athletes.

"It's always been our feeling that we ought to work together," said Ed Garvey, executive director for the NFLPA. He said his union will meet Sept. 15 with the Canadian Football League Players' Association to discuss mutual experiences.

"If it works, it will make sense to others. There is no timetable, no master plan. It is our feeling that if we reach out and help others, we will help ourselves."

The NFLPA has been organizing pro soccer players and at a meeting this week a constitution and bylaws will be written.

Representatives of 16 of the 18 NASL teams — only New York Cosmos and Tampa Bay Rowdies were not there — were at the meeting.

"The sport is coming of age and we feel the next step is for the players to form an association," said Peter Short of Minnesota Kicks.

Racing abandoned in eastern regatta

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — All racing was abandoned at the Canadian Olympic Regatta on Wednesday because of lack of wind.

Lake Ontario became a sheet of glass in the late afternoon as frustrated sailors sat in their drifting boats.

The erratic breezes never rose above five knots and the race committees eventually abandoned all racing when it became clear the fleets would be unable to complete the course within the time limit.

Racing in the 470 fleet was abandoned Tuesday because of wind conditions, although the other fleets finished.

Four races are needed to complete the series in each of the nine classes. Racing continues to Friday and regatta officials are considering the possibility of running two races in one day later in the week.

Phil Leitch of Victoria remains in second place in the Fireball Division, while Rick McBride, also of Victoria, was unplaced in the Flying Dutchman division.

Buttons move

Ed Cuppage and Ben Domoney of Royal Colwood captured the seniors gold golf buttons with a 1 up victory over Doug Peden and Vic Lea of Uplands Wednesday at Gorge Vale.

Talent-studded field ready for fifth Cedar Hill Open

They're calling the field entered in the fifth annual Cedar Hill Open "one of the strongest ever assembled for a tournament on the Island" . . . and who's to argue?

Among the 40 pros and 200 amateurs are all four previous winners of the tournament, the leading pro on the Canadian golf tour, the top Canadian tour rookie, the newly-crowned Canadian junior chmapion and others with a lengthy list of tournament victories.

Jones shot a final round 58 to win the 36-hole event with a 133 total last year.

Cowichan pro Bill Wakeham, who won the Open in 1974 and was low-pro last year, is back along with Fred Cotton of Vancouver, a pro who won the inaugural championship as an amateur in 1974, and touring pro John Morgan of Uplands who won in 1975.

Canadian tour champion Dave Barr of Kelowna will be trying for the $900 first pirze for the professionals along with Victoria's Cec Ferguson, the leading rookie on the Canadian tour, and Dan Halldorson of Brandon, winner of the Saskatchewan and Manitoba Opens.

Ray Harrington of the host club will also be on hand to defend the handicap title.

A total of $8,000 is up for grabs with $4,000 in prize money for the pros and $4,000 in prizes for the amateurs.

On Friday six of the pros will hold a free clinic. Wakeham, Gar Hamilton, Bob Panasiuk, Gary Pitchford, Dan Talbot and Lou Garrison will conduct the clinic starting at 6 p.m. at Cedar Hill.

Play starts at 6:30 a.m. Saturday and Sunday with the same draw each day:

Gray guides Villa into third round

LONDON (Reuter) — Scottish international Andy Gray guided Aston Villa, defending English League Cup champions, into the third round of this season's competition with a one-man scoring act Wednesday.

Gray scored all Aston's goals in a 3-1 win over Third Division Exeter. He scored in the 22nd, 58th and 89th minutes.

Although Exeter gave the Villa defence some anxious moments, the losers lacked the First Division side's finishing power.

Tottenham Hotspur also got a strong performance from a Scottish striker and whipped league newcomers Wimbledon 4-0. John Duncan, who scored twice in Tottenham's league match last Saturday, headed three goals between the 24th and 83rd minutes to lead his team to the third round.

In an upset, Second Division Millwall beat Newcastle of the First Division 2-0. John Seaman put Millwall ahead after five minutes and Ian Pearson clinched the London side's victory in the 79th minute.

Juvenile football in second week

Nanaimo Headhunters visit Oak Bay Farmer Construction at McDonald Park and Cowichan Timbermen play host to Saanich Hornets at Duncan Sunday as the Vancouver Island Juvenile Football League enters its second week of play.

Sunday represents Saanich's season opener, while Oak Bay blanked Courtenay Warriors 18-0 last Sunday in Courtenay.

The five-team circuit has scheduled Sunday games each week until Oct. 30, with Island finals set for Nov. 6 and B.C. championships in Vancouver Nov. 13.

Paul Leslie and Kevin Hughes scored touchdowns in the Oak Bay victory, with the Hughes major coming on a 50-yard pass-and-run play from quarterback Bernie Kidd. Paul Docherty added a field goal, single and two converts.

White Sox call up help

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago White Sox recalled seven players from the team's minor league system Wednesday, in efforts to bolster its stretch run toward the American League's west division title.

A team spokesman said right-handed pitchers Chris Knapp, Dave Frost and John Verhoeven were recalled from Iowa Oaks, while the contracts of first baseman Mike Squires, shortstop John Flannery and outfielder Tommy Cruz were purchased from the American Association team.

Outfielder Bob Coluccio was recalled from Charlestown of the International League, the spokesman said.

Knapp began the season with the White Sox and compiled a 9-6 record before being sent to Iowa where he was 0-4 with a 2.25 earned run average. The other players will be joining the White Sox for the first time this season.

Japanese slugger belts homer 755

TOKYO (Reuter) — Sadaharu Oh hit his 755th career home run Wednesday to the delight of millions of his fans who insist his feat equals Hank Aaron's major league home run record.

The 37-year-old first baseman for Yomiuri Giants tied the baseball record before a capacity crowd at Korakuen Stadium.

Traffic came to a halt in many Tokyo streets as news of the home run was flashed over radio and television.

Throughout the season the entire country has riveted it attention on Oh as the six-foot, 174-pound slugger neared Aaron's record. For Oh, the son of a Chinese father and Japanese mother, the home run ended three pressure-filled days as all of Japan waited for him to connect with his 755th.

"I don't really remember what happened as the whole atmosphere was very tense," Oh said. "I am satisfied with one homer today.

"I don't have any special feeling about breaking Aaron's record as it has been the culmination of piling one homer on top of another."

Oh's $240,000-a-year salary is worthy of any superstar player, but there are many fans who believe his feat is just a local accomplishment against pitching and general quality of play that can not be compared with American baseball.

One point Oh's detractors mention is the outfield fences in Japan's parks are 30 to 40 feet closer to home plate than they are in American stadiums.,

Also the travel involved in Japanese baseball takes a much lesser toll on players then in the United States.

But his fans also point to his many accomplishmerit during a 19-year career. Their hero has hit his 755 home runs in some 4,000 fewer times at bat than Aaron. He has won the Japanese triple crown, for batting average, home runs and runs batted in. He won the home-run title 13 consecutive times and was named the league's most valuable player eight times.

As a measure of Oh's popularity, Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda has ordered a new civilian medal, with Oh to be the first recipient.

Aaron, who faced tougher pitching and longer fences in United States baseball, retired last year with 41 home runs more than Babe Ruth's career record of 714.

Oh has averaged a home run every 10.4 at bats while Aaron hit one every 16.3 at bats and Ruth hit one every 11.7 at bats.

Oh has clouted at least 30 home runs in each of the last 14 seasons. With 39 home runs this season, he leads the Central League home-run derby in his quest for a 15th home-run title.

Hall of Fame study starts

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Bowie Kuhn appointed a five-man committee Wednesday to review the rules for election to baseball's Hall of Fame. Named to the committee were Joe Cronin, chairman of the board of the American League; Lee MacPhail, president of the American League; Chub Feeney, president of the National League; Joe Reichler, special assistant to the commissioner, and Paul Kerr, former president of the Hall of Fame. Currently, admission to the Hall of Fame is through election by the Baseball Writers' Association of America for modern players, and by consideration of the committees on veterans and the Negro Leagues for others.

Resources Investment Corp. called boon and boondoggle

It's either the greatest investment opportunity the people of British Columbia ever had or the biggest shell game in town, depending on where your politics lie.

Premier Bennett, defending his B.C. Resources Investment Corporation Act (Bill 87), said Wednesday that the new corporation had been created because "it is obvious that the people of B.C. are awaiting such a corporation because their capital lies waiting. If it is there it has to be harnessed, and this is the vehicle that will allow them to harness their capital in an acceptable way."

Opposition Leader David Barrett (NDP — Vancouver East) didn't see it quite that way.

Barrett said the new corporation was unique only in that "it gives the people the opportunity to sell off something to themselves which they already own and have already paid for once."

Barrett added that only a "government dominated, by used car dealers could come up with this type of philosophy ... where else can you sell yourself something you already own?"

But Barrett's attack didn't faze Bennett's defence of the investment corporation, scheduled to move into open market competition with the backing of several large government-owned corporations.

When the investment corporation becomes fact it will take over ownership of Plateau Mills, Kootenay Forest Products and part of Canadian Cellulose and Westcoast Transmission. It will also become owner of selected natural gas and oil rights.

Bennett said the corporation would give the ordinary people of B.C. a chance to invest in the future of the province and share the profits.

The premier told Barrett that as an investor and as a businessman he had been a total failure.

When Barrett shouted across the floor "let's go on television and discuss it" Bennett snapped "Why? I can't help it if you can't draw an audience on your own."

He told Barrett "your performance might be worthy of Las Vegas, but apparently you're only a lounge show, the warm-up for the main performance. I'm not going to drag your crowd for you, get your own crowd. If they won't come out, that means nobody wants to listen to you."

Barrett told the house that Canadian Cellulose, one of the companies due to become an asset in the new corporation "is one of our treasures and I want to make it very clear and very emphatic that I don't intend to stand by idle and see our company, owned by every citizen in this province, sold off to the few rich who can afford to buy that stuff up."

Bennett insists that when shares in the new corporation go on the market they will be at a price within reach of all citizens.

A similar corporation in Alberta had a share value of $10 when issued about a year ago and was trading Wednesday at around $17.50.

On several occasions the debate revived old and bitter memories. Barrett referred to Robert Sommers, former Social Credit minister of lands and forests who went to jail for accepting a bribe.

Bennett rebuked Barrett for digging so deep into history to make his point.

And he reminded him that his own forests minister Robert Williams had given special deals to crown-owned or soon-to-be crown-owned forest companies.

He said that had what Williams did as minister been done for "a private sector corporation . . . he might not be a research assistant at $80,000 or any other dollars today because what was done was wrong."

During his speech, Barrett stated on several occasions that the present government was giving away NDP "winners" in the business world while keeping the "losers" for the taxpayers.

"He has made the statement that everything he created was a winner and everything the former Socreds created was a loser," Bennett said. "He said they (Social Credit) created the BCR (B.C. Rail, formerly Pacific Great Eastern). The BCR was in this province long before the Scoreds and the Liberals and the Conservatives. It has been here for many years, long before I was born."

Bennett also told Barrett that charges he had made against the B.C. Ferry service were unfounded. Barrett had charged that the ferry system was working well until the change of government in 1975.

"The astronomical losses never started until you became the government," the premier told Barrett. "You took them over and Mr. Strachan (former minister of transport) made his famous gun-to-the-head speech about where everything went wrong because the employees held a gun to his head.

"We remember the speech. We have the records. That's where the dramatic turnaround took place."

On the vote Bill 87 was granted approval in principle by a vote of 27 to 15. The bill now goes to clause-by-clause debate.

Other bills moving through the House Wednesday were:

Bill 52, the Crown Corporation Reporting Act. It now awaits royal assent. The bill will establish a super-committee to watchdog crown corporations.

Bill 78, the Metric Conversion Act, also survived third reading and requires only royal assent to become law. A house-keeping measure, the bill officially ushers B.C. into the metric age.

Bill 47, the B.C. Railway Company Grant Act also passed third reading. It provides for the transfer of federal funds ($34 million) to the railway.

The legislature also gave third reading to an amended Island Trust Act.

The bill, introduced in February, would have granted to appointed trustees complete control of planning and land use on all islands in the Georgia Strait between Denman Island and the U.S.-Canada border.

Under amendments to the bill, introduced by Municipal Affair Minister Hugh Curtis and given unanimous approval Wednesday night by the Legislature, all trustees will be elected.

Earlier, Curtis said that as a result of the change, no decisions will be made by the Island Trust except by elected individuals within the trust area.

U.S. fishermen threatening to sue Canada

STEVESTON, B.C. (CP) — United States fishermen have threatened to sue the Canadian government for damages as oil from a 10,000-gallon spill here Monday spread into American waters, a spokesman for the International Salmon Commission said Wednesday.

John Roos, the commission's assistant director, said in an interview that the ISC was notified of the threatened suit as it considered closing salmon fishing in U.S. waters because of oil contamination.

Roos said the U.S. Coast Guard had told the federal Environmental Protection Service that American fishermen were so upset with having to fish in contaminated waters that they had threatened to sue both the government and company responsible for the spill.

About 700 Canadian fishboats were already tied up as a result of a closure of the lower Fraser River and part of Georgia Strait ordered by the commission.

Steveston is located at the mouth of the Fraser, and about eight miles south of Vancouver and 10 miles north of the Canada-U.S. border.

The spill apparently occurred late Monday when a submerged pipe connected to an oil tank at the Canadian Fishing Co. Ltd. plant was struck by debris carried by a high tide in the Fraser. The pipe was ruptured and heavy Bunker B oil emptied into the river.

As the oil spread south Wednesday, criticism mounted about the way in which federal agencies organized the cleanup. It did not begin until 15 hours after the spill was reported, although the equipment for it was available immediately.

Roos said the Americans said they would use their own cleanup equipment and charge the Canadian government for all the costs.

He said the decision to close the Canadian lower Gulf waters and the waters off Point Roberts, Wash., for an indefinite period was made because Canadian fishermen did not want to foul their gear and they felt the salmon caught would not be fit to eat.

But he said he was getting the opposite advice from U.S. fishermen who believed the fish caught in oily water would be safe if sufficiently washed.

Loudest criticism of the federal cleanup came from Bill Otway, executive director of the British Columbia Wildlife Federation, who has sent a telegram to Transport Minister Otto Lang demanding a public inquiry.

Blakeney warns law group

Armed action possible to keep Canada whole

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians might choose to keep the country together with force if Quebec decides to separate, Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney said Wednesday.

But a spokesman for Prime Minister Trudeau said that if any decision were made to put down separatism with arms, Trudeau "is not going to be the prime minister to do it."

Blakeney told the Canadian Bar Association that the critical question facing the country was whether force would be used to preserve the union. It was not a question that could be "answered definitively."

Canadians might be able to "agree in principle" on the question of Quebec separatism, he said.

But "it may well be that when it comes time for the specific terms, we will not have the goodwill or the wisdom which would allow this to happen without force of arms."

Trudeau's spokesman said the prime minister was "squarely on the record" against the use of force to preserve Confederation.

But a spokesman for the Task Force on Canadian Unity — a federal group lead by former Liberal cabinet minister Jean-Luc Pepin and devoted to keeping the country intact—said Blakeney's comments helped point up the urgent nature of the Quebec independence question.

"If such questions are valid enough to be raised by intelligent and wise men, it reinforces the need for the task force and the urgent nature of its work."

The New Democratic Party premier was one of several speakers to address the question of Canadian unity during sessions with about 1,000 lawyers at the bar's annual meeting.

Others, like Premier Richard Hatfield of New Brunswick and Quebec journalist Claude Ryan, editor of the daily newspaper Le Devoir, suggested that the country was ready to make the accommodations necessary to preserve Confederation.

Blakeney said the battle should be a political one fought initially in the province of Quebec. Unfortunately, he added, those who favor separatism are clearly identified—members of the Parti Quebecois government of Premier Rene Levesque. The forces that oppose separation were less easy to define.

Blakeney argued that federalist forces in Quebec could not be led by an outsider, including Prime Minister Trudeau or any other prime minister. Such leadership must come from within.

He added that he had no idea who such a leader should be, or what party he should represent. But he said all Canadians could have something to say about the kind of program needed to keep Canada together.

One of the prime reasons for tension in the country, Blakeney said, was federal intrusions into provincial jurisdictions, many of them constitutional "grey areas."

Mixed sports too much for leader

NAMES in the NEWS

Hannes Botha, president of South Africa's Amateur Athletic Union, said in Johannesburg Wednesday he quit his post in protest against growing integration of sports in the white supremacist regime because it would lead to integration in politics. "If power sharing in sport is to be allowed, the logical consequence of this principle must be power sharing at a political level," he said. Botha conferred Wednesday with Sports Minister Piet Koornhof amid speculation he would be asked to accept a post as secretary for sport, but later denied that he had resigned to take that post. "Let me make it perfectly clear that I resigned, not to become secretary for sport, but because I cannot go along the full road to integration in the South Africa Amateur Athletic Union," Botha said. "I withdrew from my post only on political grounds, this being the reason," he said. The athletic union recently moved to allow mixed racial sport at club and provincial levels within South Africa—a move which Botha said was a "radical decision with which I cannot associate myself." Botha said the athletic union move was "in direct conflict with government policy" and said "partial integration with white control" would not satisfy critics of South Africa at the International Amateur Athletic Federation. South Africa has no laws prohibiting racially integrated sports, but other laws such as the Group Areas Act which keep the races segregated in public areas, provides no room for mixed sporting facilities such as dressing rooms.

Rock singer Mick Jagger, vacationing on the Aegean coast of Turkey, is being sought by Greek police for allegedly breaking Greek sea transportation laws, the Turkish newspaper Cumhuriyet reported Wednesday. The paper said Greek authorities were seeking to arrest Jagger after a recent sailing trip to Greek islands off Turkey's coast near Bodrum, the resort village where he is staying. The paper did not specify which laws Jagger is said to have broken.

Washington State Bar Association Wednesday began hearings that could lead to reinstatement of Egil Krogh, former aide to Richard Nixon, as an attorney. A spokesman for the association said the petition for reinstatement was considered by the group's board of governors in a closed door session.

Good Muchalat spots close

Sports fishing closures appear with some regularity this time of year as fisheries officers try to ensure an adequate number of salmon reaches the river spawning beds.

Closures went into effect at midnight at some of the popular Muchalat Inlet spots and will continue for five or six weeks. Anglers planning a Labor Day holiday to those waters should check out the closures, which include:

The waters of Muchalat Inlet lying easterly and inside the boundary signs in Muchalat Inlet at a point one-half mile west of McCurdy Creek and at a point true south on the opposite shore of Muchalat Inlet.

The waters of Tlupana Inlet (Head Bay) lying north and inside the boundary sign located at Princes Royal Point and at a point in an easterly direction on the opposite shore of Tlupana Inlet.

The waters of Tahsis Inlet lying north and inside the boundary signs at the head of Tahsis Inlet, near West Bay.

The waters of Zeballos Inlet lying northerly and inside the boundary signs in Zeballos Inlet at a point about one mile east of the Little Zeballos River and at a point in a southerly direction on the opposite shore of Zeballos Inlet.

Cowichan Bay chinook anglers will get a break. The big chinooks are in the bay, but the boundary line, from Bluenose Marina to Skinner Point, won't be put on until midnight Tuesday.

Already in effect is a closure on all waters of Nitinat Narrows lying inside or northerly of a line from the south end of Tsuquanah Point to Whyac Point and south of fishing boundary signs on both sides of Nitinat Narrows (south portion of Nitinat Lake) about 8,000 feet north and east of Whyac Point.

Also closed to all salmon fishing until Oct. 20 is the portion of Nitinat Lake and the mouth of Nitinat River, inside or northerly of a line from a fishing boundary sign at the north of Campus Creek to a fishing boundary on the opposite shore of Nitinat Lake.

All the waters of Nitinat River are closed to salmon fishing until Oct. 20.

Marble River, from the Port Alice Highway bridge downstream to Varney Bay is closed to all salmon sports fishing until further notice.

The waters of Varney Bay, southerly of an imaginary line between two white triangular boundary signs, one on Makwaznht Island, the other on Kenny Point, are closed to sports salmon fishing until further notice.

In addition to those closures, the provincial fish and wildlife non-tidal sports fishing regulations list a number of closures on Vancouver Island streams at this time of year.

Motherhood losing status

Happiness? 'Then no kids'

By LARRY BARTLETT
Colonist-Copley News Service

NEW ORLEANS — Motherhood may be losing its status as an American ideal.

A team of sociologists at the University of New Orleans has found that women tend to be happier in a childless marriage, even though husbands are most often contented when there are children in the home.

University research assistant Linda Geiss, together with Dr. Dennis McSeveney and Dr. Hugh Floyd bases this conclusion on data from surveys conducted throughout the United States by the National Opinion Research Centre.

Hundreds of couples, young and old, were asked to rate their marriages as very happy, pretty happy and not too happy. The team analyzed this data by categorizing the respondents according to age, sex and parental status . . . classifying the respondents as current parents, post-parents (those whose children have grown up and left home) and non-parents.

They found that the highest percentage of all wives reporting very happy marriages were childless, while the smallest percentage of those with happy marriages were mothers.

"Of the childless wives of age 30 or younger, 83 per cent said they were very happy in marriage, while only 62 per cent of mothers in the same age group reported very happy marriages," says Geiss.

"In age group 31-50, there was a wide discrepancy between the amount of marital happiness reported by males and females. Of the childless females in this age group, 72 per cent said they had very happy marriages . . . but only 48 per cent of the males in this age group reported the same degree of marital happiness.

"We wondered why so few childless husbands — as compared with childless wives — were happy," she continues. "Then, we looked at the employment status of their wives and found that the men with working wives were even more unhappy . . . only 39 per cent of these husbands said they had very happy marriages. However, 83 per cent of employed wives in the age group 30-50 said they had very happy marriages. We hypothesize that the discrepancy had to do with differences in marital role expectations."

The university sociologist points out that women generally want equal partnership in marriage, while husbands — because of social tradition — expect to dominate the family.

"When the wife is working and bringing money home, she has a more forceful voice in decision-making and can expect her husband to help with household chores," Geiss observes. "In this situation, her expectations for equal sharing in marriage tend to be fulfilled and her chances for marital happiness are increased.

"Previous research has shown that the marital power of wives — particularly that of non-working mothers — decreases as children are introduced into the marriage . . . and decreases according to the number of children in the family. For this reason, parenthood tends to make husbands more content as their wives grow less content."

Sociologist Dr. Hugh Floyd, who participated in the study, says that marital discontent is the result of changing values and family roles.

"In the past, society emphasized the value of the family as a unit, but during the last several decades there has been a growing emphasis on marterialism and individual desires," he points out. "Concurrent with this, there has been a lessening of prestige associated with motherhood and child-rearing activities . . . society has begun to regard household chores as demeaning.

Darcy Holhauser: From brink of death to baseball player

Darcy beat the odds

By CHRIS SMITH

WINNIPEG (CP) — Darcy Holhauser hasn't been sick this year.

For nine-year-old Darcy, that's important, really something.

Born 27 weeks premature on Sept. 6, 1967, the boy was not expected to live. Before he was one year old, doctors told his mother he had a 90-per-cent chance of dying from spinal meningitis.

Before his second birthday he had mumps and measles. He has had a brain scan for a tumor, tests for bone cancer, and last year he had rheumatic fever.

But this year, Darcy, a Grade 4 student, came home with his first physical fitness award and a half dozen track ribbons from school and camp.

For the first time in his life, he can really enjoy sports, the feeling of moving around without having to worry about tiring himself out.

"I hate hospitals.
Yuch! I don't want to go there anymore."

Until this past year, Darcy felt he would have to make annual visits to the hospital with some sickness or another.

"I hate hospitals," he says. "Yuch! I don't want to go there anymore."

The years of worrying about him every time he went out the door seem to be over for his mother, Ann:

"It seemed he'd go outside and bingo, he'd have caught something. If another kid 10 blocks away had something, Darcy would come home with it," she says.

Mrs. Holhauser thinks her son was the smallest premature baby in Canada to survive. His weight dropped to one pound, 11 ounces shortly after birth and a nurse in the Prince Albert, Sask., hospital where he was born nicknamed him "Tiny Tim."

It was three months before Darcy could leave the hospital.

Now, baseball is Darcy's favorite sport. He plays second base for his school team but he says:

"We always lose to Lord Selkirk school. We have to play the good teams without any practice."

Like most boys his age, Darcy says physical education is his favorite school subject. His evenings are mostly spent outside playing with friends.

Darcy always did participate in sports like swimming and running but only within his own limits.

Even the poor appetite he had has improved since Christmas, says his mother as she put a pizza in the oven for him as a treat after he returned home from a three-day camp in the Whiteshell Provincial Park.

And now, she says, Darcy is the "life of the house." It's almost too quiet while he was at camp.

Darcy is now a 66-pound dynamo enjoying the life of any nine-year-old boy.

Network sexism attacked

CAMBRIDGE, Mass (AP) — For television producers who worry about the moral tone of TV programs, a Harvard-based group has a message — sex is more than breathless kisses and sensuous whispers.

It is also daddies who burn the toast, mommies who fuss over floor wax and little boys who never cry.

The group is called the Project on Human Sexual Development. It believes children watch so much TV that the screen is a powerful force teaching them how to act. So the group wants people who write the dramas and situation comedies to know when they are portraying sex in its subtlest forms.

Elizabeth Roberts, a Harvard researcher who directs the program, says: "The messages, values and images that are conveyed about male-female relationships and affection and intimacy are all part of what sexuality really is."

The project is sponsoring discussion sessions for TV writers, directors, producers and executives. In their next get-together, they will review scenes from shows that demonstrate television's view of family life, men among themselves and couples together.

The idea is not to say that what television does is necessarily bad. Instead, Miss Roberts said, the project is trying to help TV creators see the kinds of behavior roles they are perpetuating. Then they can decide whether they want to continue them.

"The Brady Bunch can convey a lot of sexual messages, just as much as Charlie's Angels can," said Miss Roberts. "We are working with television people to look at what those messages are and what they're saying.

Look-again seminars for married couples

MONTREAL (CP) — A recent weekend encounter session taught a happily married elderly couple that it pays to take a second look at the one you love.

Percy and Jessie McDonell, one of about 500 couples who have attended weekend sessions during the last few years at the retreat in St. Jerome, about 30 miles north of Montreal, say they discovered most people go into marriage without a sound knowledge of the ground rules.

Marriage Encounter Montreal, which runs sessions for up to 10 couples at a time, is an interdenominational group, although the accent is on Roman Catholicism.

Ray Prince, one of the group's organizers, said religion is not emphasized in the encounters.

"But at some point . . . when there is the inevitable outpouring of love present that is more powerful than the couple put together, you have to look beyond for the author of this love . . . and that is where you find God."

"Marriage encounter makes your love for each other more solid and that is part of religion . . . trying to make it better," said 67-year-old Jessie. "You can't do it without religious feelings."

Percy, 77, says he thought he knew everything there was to know about marriage after 47 years with his wife.

"Speaking from a senior citizen's point of view, I felt as if I had reached the top of the mountain," he said. "I had experienced all that marriage could offer and it was all below me.

"I didn't know it all. It came as a shock to discover that a man and a woman may love each other equally but in different ways.

"You come to understand another person as a living, breathing, totally 'other' being."

Greek—the ancient food with a timeless taste

By PHYLLIS HANES
The Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON — The simple way of life of the Greek island villagers where she was reared is reflected in the kitchen of Theonie Mark's New England home.

There's not one electrical gadget or appliance in sight. No mixer, blender, juicer, or food processor is ever used.

"I've just never needed them," Theonie said. "To me, there's nothing difficult about mixing up a cake or a batch of bread by hand. I've never needed them . . . when testing recipes for my Greek cookbook."

At first glance, there is nothing remarkably unusual about Theonie's kitchen other than its attractive decor. Greek copper pans hang above a small, black, iron, wood stove; Greek island pottery brightens the wall behind a plain, pine table. There is also a sink, stove, the usual basic modern kitchen equipment found in any kitchen — but no electric skillets, can openers, or other superfluous appliances.

Theonie, who appears on the "Greek Island Cooking" television show here, was born and brought up on the island of Rhodes where she learned to cook the way all island women learn — by watching her mother, aunts, and grandmother.

Married to an American, she lives with him and their three sons in a 200-year-old farm house in suburban Boston.

Her cookbook, Greek Island Cooking (Little Brown, $8.95), is divided into the seasons, with appropriate recipes and descriptions of the beauty of the Aegean islands and the way of life of the people.

The cookbook tells not only of dishes and procedures the Greeks have inherited from their forefathers, but also the variations introduced into Greek cooking by invaders of the islands over the centuries.

How is Greek island cooking different from other Greek cooking? Let's take green spinach pie, a familiar dish to many Americans.

Made the island way, this dish has a homemade crust rather than the thin, flaky filo dough you find when it's served in most Greek-American restaurants. Also there is no egg in the mixture of spinach and spices and cheese that makes up the filling.

Theonie believes strongly that traditional recipes shouldn't be altered, therefore she doesn't add eggs as some recipes do. Her crust is a mixture of white and whole wheat flour with yeast, which produces a breadlike dough.

In the cities on the Greek islands this dish is sent to the neighborhood oven to bake in a round, tin-lined copper pan called a tapsi. But the vegetables also can be arranged in a 9-by-12-by-2-inch pan and baked in the kitchen oven without the vegetables losing any of their flavor or color.

STUFFED SUMMER VEGETABLES (GHEMISTA)

3 large green peppers
3 12-inch zucchini
3 medium-sized potatoes
3 large, firm, red tomatoes
1½ cups chicken stock
1 cup rice
½ cup pine nuts
1/3 cup olive oil
1 chopped onion
1½ pounds ground lamb
½ cup chopped, flat parsley
1 tablespoon tomato paste
½ cup cold water

Salt and pepper to taste.

First prepare vegetables, each group individually. Cut off tops of peppers, remove seeds, blanch for five minutes in boiling water, remove from water and drain. Cut off zucchini stems and cut them in half crosswise. With small knife, scoop out pulp, careful not to puncture skin. Blanch in boiling water one minute, then drain. Peel potatoes and hollow an opening large enough for two tablespoons of stuffing, then blanch five minutes in boiling water and drain. Cool with other vegetables.

Slice tomato tops almost off, leaving them hinged to serve as covers. With a spoon, scoop out pulp and save.

To make stuffing heat oil in skillet over moderate heat; add onion and cook until wilted. Stir in chopped meat and cook until it is all crumbles, then add the rest of ingredients. Stir with a wooden spoon and cook over moderate heat 10 to 15 minutes or until water is absorbed, rice is half cooked, and mixtute is thick. Remove from fire and cool.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Stuff vegetables loosely, using a spoon and arrange in groups in a shallow pan, stuffing side up, except for zucchini, which should lie down snugly side by side. Pour chicken stock into pan, cover vegetables loosely with aluminum foil and cook 15 minutes longer. Cool slightly and transfer to a platter. Pour over any broth and serve. Serves four to six.

CALORIE-CONSCIOUS COOKING

By Barbara Gibbons

Here's how to "process" your own skinny cheese spreads — without a crockful of unwanted calories.

Begin with nearly no-fat pot cheese (that's cottage cheese without a lot of cream calories or liquid added). Whip it up in a blender or food processor with flavor-adders like garlic, onion, pepper, mustard, Worchestershiire, Tabasco and zesty seasonings.

Serve your skinny spreads in a small brown crock, the kind left over from the fattening spreads. Lowfat pot cheese is 99 per cent fat-free (check the label!) while most processed cheese spreads are 20 per cent fat or more, and about 50 calories a tablespoon!

A food processor can make short work of spreads. It used to be that only well-heeled cooks could afford to tinker around with food processors, but there are affordable North Americans versions that do the job just as well as the fancy imports — and for far fewer dollars. A food processor's steel chopping blade can mince ingredients in a few seconds flat, then whip pot cheese into "cream cheese" almost as fast as you can turn it on and off.

Lacking a food processor, you can still make these spreads in a blender. Chop, shred or grate the solid ingredients by hand, whip the pot cheese smooth in the blender, then add the minced ingredients. Blend only till combined. (Thick mixes are more difficult to remove from a blender than from a food processor.)

GARDEN CHEESE SPREAD I

1 cup 99 per cent fat-free pot cheese or dry cottage cheese
½ teaspoon salt or garlic salt
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 radishes
½ small onion, peeled
¼ of a sweet bell pepper, seeded

In blender: Blend cheese, salt and Worcestershire smooth. Mince or chop vegetables by hand and blend into cheese.

In food processor: Chop vegetables using metal chopping blade. Add remaining ingredients and blend just until mixed. Spoon into small crock or covered refrigerator bowl. Keep chilled. Makes about one and one-third cups, under 10 calories per tablespoon.

GARDEN CHEESE SPREAD II

(Adapted from the Farberware Food Processor Recipe Guide)

2 cups 99 per cent fat-free pot cheese or dry cottage cheese
½ teaspoon dry mustard, or 1 teaspoon prepared
½ teaspoon salt or celery salt, to taste
pinch of pepper
2 large radishes, quartered
½ small cucumber or zucchini, in one-inch lengths
½ small bell pepper, seeded
1 small onion, peeled and quartered
4 pimiento-stuffed green Spanish olives, halved

In blender: Blend cottage cheese, mustard, salt and pepper smooth. By hand mince or chop vegetables fine, then add to blender. Process only till mixed.

In food processor: Chop vegetables using steel chopping blade. Add remaining ingredients and process only until smooth. Store in small crock or covered bowl in the refrigerator. Makes about two and one-half cups, 10 calories per tablespoon.

MOCK BOURSIN

1 cup 99 per cent fat-free pot cheese or dry cottage cheese
½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
2 or 3 sprigs parsley
1 clove garlic, peeled

In blender: Beat cheese and salt smooth (will be thick). Mince parsley and garlic and blend into cheese.

In food processor: Chop garlic and parsley using steel chopping blade. Add remaining ingredients and blend smooth. Store in covered crock in refrigerator. Makes one cup, about 10 calories per tablespoon.

Heritage lingers in cake contest

TORONTO (CP) — There is a woman in Edmonton who loves to bake cases — so much that she flew to Toronto during the Canadian National Exhibition with one to enter a competition which still remains as popular as it did 99 years ago when the exhibition began.

Elsa Jenkins, who has been manager of the women's division of the CNE for 25 years, said the Edmonton woman is not unique.

She said in an interview that baking, sewing, crocheting and rug-making contests are not only popular, but are getting more so as entire families enter the fruits of their leisure-time activities.

In a corner of the Better Living Building at the CNE are hundreds of handcrafts done by hobbyists all over Canada.

"The better living concept changes somewhat each year," said Mrs. Jenkins, "but the traditional is still here."

She said that this year because of inflation, the organizers recognize that people are watching their pocketbooks more carefully than in the past and have planned the pavilion with that in mind.

"For instance, in our cooking demonstrations, the gourmet shows have gone forever. We're getting back to basics and showing the public how to stretch the dollar."

ann landers

Dear Ann Landers: You are supposed to be a smart cookie. Can you figure this out? I bet my wife $10 you'd flunk just as we did.

The parent of a Houston high school pupil received a message from the school principal concerning a special meeting on a proposed new educational program.

The message read: "Our school's cross-graded, multi-ethnic, individualized learning program is designed to enhance the concept of an open-ended learning program with emphasis on a continuum of multi-ethnic, academically enriched learning, using the identified intellectually gifted child as the agent or director of his own learning. Major emphasis is on cross-graded, multi-ethnic learning with the main objective being to learn respect for the uniqueness of a person."

The parent responded: "Dear Principal: I have a college degree, speak two foreign languages and know four Indian dialects. I've attended a number of county fairs and three goat ropings but I haven't the faintest idea as to what the hell you are talking about."

OK, Ann, do YOU know what the principal was trying to say? Two Dummies In Fort Worth

Dear Friends: I don't think you are dummies. That principal needs to learn how to express himself in simple terms.

What he means is: "We are planning a program for students of all races which we hope will encourage the brighter ones to move ahead at their own speed. Grading will be geared to the learning level of the student. In this way we hope to teach and grade each student according to his ability to learn." P.S. Pay your wife the ten dollars. Or better yet, send it to your local Heart Association.

Dear Ann Landers: I read with interest the letters from teachers who complained about the kids acting like animals. May I present the other side?

Maintaining discipline is a difficult problem when a techer is faced with 20 to 30 bored students. Most students are tired of games, tired of movies, tired of milk breaks and tired of listening to a tape recorder instead of a human voice. They are also tired of field trips and tired of teachers who have no imagination and don't really like kids. If the teachers would do what they are paid to do, discipline would be no problem.

Concerning respect: How can students respect a teacher who goes around bad-mouthing them? People usually get what they give. It's about time the students were trown a little respect. — On Their Side

Dear On: Thank you for another point of view. Your letter is not without merit.

Why second marriages work

With your eyes wide open

By ELAINE SMYTH
Colonist-Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — Is love better—richer—the second time around?

"Research shows that second relationships have a better chance for success than first relationships," said Elsie Zala, a licensed marriage, family and child counsellor.

That doesn't mean there aren't any problems, she added.

Zala has a master's degree in counselling from California State University at Los Angeles.

WHEN SHE discusses the second time around, Zala isn't just talking about second marriage, "because so many couples today are not married. But the key word is commitment, whether it is legally binding or emotionally binding."

On a superficial level, the problems couples face in a second relationship aren't much different than those they faced in the first one: money, sex and children.

"The real problem is lack of communication. Everybody knows that most marriages fail because of issues involving these three areas, but the reality is that marriages have really failed because of lack of communication.

"IF COUPLES cannot communicate, they cannot solve or improve upon them."

Zala, divorced, has what she terms "a committed relationsip" with Gene Bischoff, with whom she shares a small, private counselling practice. She also is project co-ordinator of the preventive services component for Casa Familiar, a social service agency for Spanish-speaking residents in San Ysidro, Calif., and is the agency's acting director.

While she said she has no quick formula for preventing a second failure in a relationship, "I do have some ideas about how to approach a second relationship."

The key question to ask, she said, is: Can you live alone?

THIS MEANS asking if some of the things that are important to you can be achieved without anyone else such as having fun, making a living and making decisions.

Next, take the time to sort out what happened in the first, failed relationship. What did you learn from it? What will you do differently in the second relationship? What do you want in a new partner that you did or did not have with the first?

Indidviduals contemplating a second relationship must also ask themselves what issues are not negotiable, she added.

This can be anything from the way you raise your own children to your need to surround yourself with fine antiques.

"YOU COLLECT antiques and he calls them junk," she said. "Can you live without those antiques? Often, in order to retain some of those things, there has to be a trade-off.

"You say, 'What does he want in exchange for my keeping the antiques?' He may love the 'Wide World of Sports' and you deplore sports. A fair trade-off might be your acceptance of the TV sports show in exchange for his acceptance of your interest in antiques.

"AND THAT'S where communication skills come in. If you love a guy, you're not going to give him up because he doesn't love antiques, are you? It's called communication and compromise."

And before entering into another intimate relationship, it's necessary to deal with all of the questions, insecurities and uncertainties.

Zala stresses the need to meet with others in similar situations and form self-help groups or seek aid from counselling or therapy from a trained professional.

In a world of "groupness," she said, there is virtually no place for those about to enter into a second relationship or who have just committed themselves to one.

THE RESULT of all of this introspection "would be feeling whole — feeling competent and feeling independent."

"This kind of evolved person can more easily deal with, for example, children that you may not be able to love but with whom you'll be living or seeing on weekends — or the 'sinister shadow' of the ex-spouse lurking behind the kids — and deal with the issue of money that goes to the previous family instead of the current one."

While Zala said problems are basically the same, there are some differences between the first and second relationship that need to be examined.

FOR THE MAJORITY, the first marriage meant the couple was young, inexperienced and usually at the same level of sophistication.

"They learn to deal with the daily activities of sharing a life — finding a place to live, shopping, buying furniture and building a family. And they learn to be sexual partners and to handle relatives and parents-in-law."

In the second relationship, whether it's marriage or living together, the couple is "starting out as older, more experienced, probably hurt, disappointed and (feeling like) 'failed' adults.

"And in this second relationship, most couples have a family and there is the worry over how his-her-your children will fit into that new relationship."

Women get "everything they want'

$1,200-a-week desolation at LG-2

CAMP LG-2, Que. (CP) — The Quebec government's $20-billion hydro construction site on James Bay may seem a male - dominated enterprise but for some workers it is the ideal woman's world.

With 6,000 men on the site and about 400 women, the odds are about 15-1 against the men in James Bay's social life.

"The women are just like bees in a hive," said an administrator as he shared a drink with his room-mate in his trailer. "They act just like queen bees.

"They get everthing they want."

In her favor

Certainly when one of the women goes to the only discotheque at the sprawling LG-2 camp, the odds are all on her side.

Club rules say that men cannot enter the disco, aptly named La Femina, unless they are accompanied by a woman.

"It's fun up here in the north," said Joanne Dallaire, who works in the camp's general store.

Another woman, a computer programmer, agreed: "I'll be staying as long as I can."

Women have been working in the camp for about two years.

Pay losers

However, they still lose out to the men when pay cheques are handed out. They average about $400 a week for their jobs in the laundry, stores, offices and cafeterias compared to the $700-$1,200 a week collected by the men for heavy construction work.

Lise Boivin, a 20-year-old laundry worker, said "I used to take care of children in Montreal but I make a fortune compared with what I made there. I don't care if I ever go back to the cities again.

Indeed, money is the No. 1 attraction at the construction site, isolated in the wilderness.

Ray Modesto, a 38-year-old rock drill repairman, looks forward to the day he will have $20,000 saved for a cabin cruiser.

House paid

"I've already paid off my house mortgage and my 16-year-old daughter back in Ayan is getting a good education," he said.

"Where else can a bus driver make this kind of money," asked Daniel Dubois, who clears $400 a week driving buses and trucks on the site.

For many, LG-2 provides jobs that just aren't available back home.

"Life here is fairly flat and not much out of the ordinary happens," said Robert Cousineau, 24, a garageman.

"But I'll probably come back, you know, because jobs are hard to get and it doesn't cost much to live here. I buy cigarettes, newspapers, draught beer, and that's about it."

Desolate

LG-2 is desolate and "there certainly are more elegant places to be," one worker complained, but the camp has lately added a number of attractions that make life more bearable.

There is an arena, a gymnasium, a pool room, a handicrafts centre, a movie theatre, a tavern, a swimming pool, ski slopes and Le Remblai, a French restaurant.

A meal of scampi, steak au poivre and wine can cost $40 a head.

Small respite

Despite the activities, many prefer to hang out at the general store - cum - bank - cum - telephone centre. Twenty pay phones there are kept busy, providing the workers with a personal link to the south.

But all the activities merely provide a respite to the 12-hour work shifts.

All day and all night, the construction goes on.

LG-2 is the biggest hydro-electric site in North America and one of the biggest in the world. It is part of the James Bay project that will harness the La Grande River with four powerhouses, and will set down two more on the La Forge and Eastmain rivers.

By 1985, when construction is to be completed, James Bay will double Quebec's existing hydro capacity to 30,000 megawatts.

The James Bay project will pump out 10,190 megawatts to Montreal, with 5,328 of those megawatts crackling along the transmission lines from LG-2 alone.

Gunman gives up

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — An armed man who barracaded himself inside a city house Tuesday surrendered to police early Wednesday, nearly 16 hours after he threatened to shoot anyone who tried to enter. No shots were fired.

Police Chief Syd Brown said that in the last week, police seized guns three times from a person living at the residence and that a machete and two rifles were seized Monday.

Cobble Hill just first of three

Horse Happenings

By MARILYN McCALL

The Cobble Hill Horse Show, held last weekend, started off three weekends of country fairs and horse shows — Saanichton Fall Fair is next weekend, and the Cowichan Exhibition is the week after.

Miss Bernice Ramsey of Vancouver, judged the show. Bronwen Danylyshyn, riding Cinnamon, was the only double winner of the day, taking first in both local western pleasure horse or pony, and western pleasure horse or pony.

Equitation for western local riders under 18 was won by Nola Rankin on Royal Maximilian, and equitation for English local riders under 18 was won by Leslie Pink on Queen Cat. In English equitation (under 14), Glynis Boggs and Redwings were first. The English equitation (14-18) class was won by Judy Baker on Dapper Dan. Marilyn Little and Quietly Wild were first in hack over 14'2" and up to 15'2", and the hack class for horses over 15'2" was won by Barbara Dyson on Tozzie.

In the child's pony class, Karen Roderick, on Belle Vista, was first. Sahm Sheba, shown by Joan MacDonald won registered Anglo-or half Arab in hand. Riding Sonny Mountain, Merydie Starch won registered Arabian, Anglo or half-Arab, English or western pleasure. The pair of Lee Woods on Korbee, and Danielle Ban Bassen on Takalla won the saddle pairs, English or western, class.

Kelvin Heather, ridden by Mrs. C. C. Carpenter was the champion saddle horse of the show. Christine Van Horne, riding Amira Nigma, won the junior jumping (under 18) class. Maureen Kinnee and Misty Mark were first in maiden jumping. Open jumping was won by Nancy McMinn on Hayden. Riding Grey Cloud, Jamie Richardson was first in the Cobble Hill jumping stake.

School district No. 63 is offering a night school course in practical horse care and management this fall. Several local knowledgeable horse people will be giving lectures, people such as Merrill Harrop and Dr. Ellen Guttormson. The course will include basic concepts in grooming and handling care; feeding and nutrition; barn management; tack and equipment; first aid; control of parasites; preventive hoof care and hoof problems; your horse, you and the law.

The class will be held on Thursday evenings at a cost of $16 for eight sessions. The cost for each additional family member is $9. Sept. 29 is the first night of classes, and the location will be Royal Oak school. Registration may be done through the Saanich school board in Sidney.

COMING EVENTS

Sept. 3, 4, 5 — Saanichton Fair, C.H.S.A. horse show, Saanichton.

Sept. 9, 10 — Cowichan Exhibition light horse C.H.S.A. show, Cowichan Fairgrounds, Duncan.

Your Good Health

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My daughter feeds her year-old baby the yolk of a poached egg, but discards the white because she says the white contains cholesterol. Is there any scientific basis for this belief? — MRS. A. T.

The yolk contains the cholesterol, not the white. Some may disagree with me, bit I believe the age of one is pretty early to be worrying about cholesterol, perhaps sacrificing good, nourishing food.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I use manganese dioxide to color clay used in pottery. Is this dangerous? — L.W.

You should take sensible precautions. The principal effects of long-term occupational exposure to manganese compounds include central nervous system poisoning and pneumonia. Acute inhalation exposure may occur in manganese miners. It's called metal fume fever.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a 23-year-old girl. I've read the studies that seem to indicate eating of certain foods (chocolate, colas, butter, cheese, etc.) are not a factor that aggravates acne. My own experience seems to show otherwise. When my diet is free of these foods, my skin reflects it with improvement. What is your knowledge as to the role played by diet? — D.E.B.

Not very extensive, I fear, which places me in good company. I doubt there is any clear answer to your question. At one time doctors were sure these items aggravated acne. More recently, as you have read, there has been a downgrading of the role of diet.

You have your own best answer. Without certain foods you find improvement. You could have sensitivities to these items. Others may not. I knew a young man whose acne flared after drinking beer. Such peculiarities are not uncommon and have to be discovered on an individual basis.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am in my late 20s. During each of my three pregnancies I developed tiny moles on my breasts. Some are dark brown, others flesh colored. My doctor says this is not uncommon, and they do not have to be removed. Can you explain why this happens to some women? — C.P.

The gland activity during pregnancy causes pigmentation on the body where it may never have appeared before (as in nipple color, for example). The moles are other examples of this, and are no cause for concern. But existing moles that suddenly change appearance for no obvious reason should be looked at by the doctor.

M. V. Chesnut's Garden Notes

In my last column we discussed some of the ancient superstitions surrounding the peony, and in this connection I should point out that this is probably the hardiest of all our common perennial flowers.

Even the Canadian Arctic holds no terrors for this plant, for at least one of its ancestors comes from the bitterly cold, windswept plains of Siberia, where it was at one time highly prized by the Mongols for its roots, which provided valuable food.

Another ancestor of our modern peony grows wild in the colder parts of North China, and since the beginning of time the women of China have bathed their faces in water distilled from the petals of this flower.

About three months ago I had a letter from a reader complaining that she couldn't get her peonies to bloom. Purchased and planted in the spring of 1975, they grew well but failed to produce any buds or flowers, so the following spring she moved them to a sunnier location.

Still no blooms, so this last spring she shifted them again, this time to a specially prepared bed enriched with purchased topsoil and old rotted manure, but when her neighbors' plants were blooming their heads off in early June, not even a single flower bud appeared on her husky plants.

She was convinced, of course, that her dealer had sold her a bunch of dud roots and she was all for digging them up and consigning them to the incinerator. Actually, the fault was entirely her own, and for two reasons.

First, peonies should be planted or transplanted in the fall rather than the spring, and second, she didn't allow them to remain in one place long enough to get themselves properly established. The annual transplanting would have been enough to discourage almost any perennial plant, but expecially the peony, which is always resentful of any root disturbance.

It is the nature of the peony to perform best when allowed to settle down comfortably in the one place for a span of four or five years, in rich but rather heavy loam soil, and with sun for at least half the day. However, there comes a time in the life of every plant when it becomes overcrowded and congested, and when it has exhausted all the goodness in its planting site.

When this occurs, there is nothing for it but to dig them up, divide the roots and replant the pieces. The best time to perform this operation is when the first reddish fall coloring appears in the leaves, usually in September.

Ease your overgrown peony clump out of the ground gently, then cut off all the topgrowth right down close to the root, and the only safe place for this material is in the incinerator. We have had a lot of peony disease hereabouts — an infection that causes the buds to rot or dry up — and burning or burying deeply the spent topgrowth is a good preventive measure.

Now you can divide your clump of roots into smaller pieces, using a long knife or an old hacksaw blade. Don't cut them up too small, for while any small piece with an "eye" is capable of growing into a flowering plant, such small bits could take as long as four years before they start blooming. Large pieces with three to five eyes should bloom next year or the year after.

It is a good idea to enrich the planting site with plenty of old rotted manure, or failing this, with damp peat moss and bone meal. Dig these materials in widely — don't just dump them in the bottom of each planting hole — for we want our peony roots to spread out sideways as well as pushing down. If you have any wood ashes from your fireplace or incinerator, dig these in too, for peonies require a bit more potash than most of our garden plants.

In planting your pieces of root, be careful not to set them in too deeply. The eyes or growth buds in the top of the roots should be covered with two inches of soil. Roots planted much deeper than this will grow but they won't bear any flowers, while shallower planting may allow the roots to dry out.

Jack Smith

Friends sometimes express wonder that I am a student of birds when there are supposedly more rewarding species to study, such as man's fellow primates — the apes and monkeys.

I am now gratified to learn that my choice in this question has been brilliantly justified by Nicholas S. Thompson of the department of psychology, Clark University, Worcester, Mass.

Thanks to Dr. Charles E. Olmstead, a psychologist at the University of California Los Angeles school of medicine, I have a copy of Thompson's essay, My Descent from the Monkey (Perspective in Ethology, Bateson and Klopfer, Plenum Press), in which he not only disposes of the notion that monkeys are more fun than birds, but the myth that scientists are dull writers.

His purpose in writing is to explain to his colleagues why he gave up monkeys and turned to the crow, at the very moment when primates, being thought "closer to man," were the darlings of ethnological research.

Thompson confesses that first he went after the easy money, "writing that dreaded paragraph which explained to the review panel why it should put aside 20 inexpensive studies of local and-or easily maintained species, such as the rat, the frog, the mourning dove, the German shepherd, or the American housewife, in favor of your primate study, which demanded either a Land Rover and a ticket for eight to Nairobi, or 20 custom-made stainless steel cages and an air-conditioned laboratory lavishly outfitted with equipment for maintaining exotic animals.

"In such paragraphs," he goes on, "one traditionally argued that the monkey should be studied — despite exorbitant costs — because the monkey is closer to man. The logic was obviously devious . . . If 'closeness to man' was such a certain warranty of theoretical importance, then why not study man himself? I always thought that one day I would be punished for these hypocrisies, but never did I realize how fitting and devastating the punishment would be."

Thompson was discouraged from going into the field to study apes by "an irrational fear of leeches and lions." So he spent three years with monkeys, day and night, in a windowless basement laboratory at University of California Berkeley.

"From the horror of those days," he writes, "I remember almost nothing about simian social organization. I remember the constant battle to keep man, monkey and environment in their separate places. I remember the paraphernalia of sanitation: The stainless steel buckets, the steam hoses which behaved like sulky snakes when one tried to coil them, and the Anti-TB foot tray which exuded a pleasant odor of iodine but which left one's foot faintly wet for hours.

"I remember the virus B anxiety, helped along by occasional ambiguous reports of deaths at other laboratories, deaths from monkey bites, or monkey scratches, or monkey spit, or perhaps even just monkey breath. Each of these hazards required a piece of garb to protect the investigator, so that the official standard outfit in our laboratory consisted of boots, coveralls, rubber gloves, paper caps, face masks, and goggles.

"Each worker in the laboratory omitted some part of this armor, based on a personal calculation which included as variables how much he hated the particular item and how recently he had read of a Monkey B death. The goggles were a favorite omission because they fogged on the inside from one's breath and on the outside from the steam hose.

"Those of us who omitted this particular item developed a covert, subconscious squint, which we deployed in the presence of monkeys to guard us against a lehal dose of monkey spit. Thus did we had had pledged our professional lives to understanding monkeys spend the majority of our energies in isolating ourselves from monkeys . . ."

Thompson came to hate monkeys. "In desperation," he writes, "I turned to the crow. At that time, I had learned only two facts about crows. At the age of 23, I had learned from a graduate student colleague that crows had an interesting vocal system. At the age of 10, I had learned that you can't shoot a crow with an air rifle. For a desperate man, those two pieces of information were enough . . ."

Most provosts and chairman who had monkey money thought Thompson was mad, asking for crow money. Finally he got on with a small liberal arts college as a comparative psychologist, resisted their offer of space for monkeys, borrowed some binoculars and went into the woods to follow crows.

Support was hard to get. There was a monkey on his back. He was haunted by the "closeness-to-man" argument he had used to get money for monkeys; and to lay this ghost he began to argue that in fact the crow was closer to man than the monkey.

"I used to require a drink in my hand in order to make this argument," he admits, "but now I can do it cold sober."

Of course Thompson is further along than I am, what with his scientific training. I don't think I'm ready for crows. I'm still trying to understand the house finch and the housewife, and sometimes it's easier with a drink in my hand.

Sydney Harris

Of all the nations in the western world—and maybe the eastern, too, for all I know—North Americans are the only people who seem somehow obscurely afraid to use our language fully, deeply and accurately.

I was at a dinner for some visiting Spaniards the other evening, and was surprised (as I should not have been) at the rich and flexible way in which they spoke English. Their diction, syntax and, most of all, vocabulary would put most North Americans to shame.

Except for pulpit and political oratory, and the unctuous radio voices with an important message for every housewife, we have degenerated into a nation of stumblers and mumblers, vague and inarticulate, using the same tired words over and over.

Not only do we find no beauty, in the strength and suppleness of our great language, but we deride those who try to express themselves verbally in fresh and unusual locutions. It is as though we would accept nothing but worn and ragged dollar bills as our legitimate currency.

Our hostility toward what we call "two-bit words," for instance, does not come so much from our native dislike of pomposity, but rather from a sneaking feeling of inferiority and a resentment toward anyone who seems to be putting on rhetorical airs.

"Great," "swell," "lousy," "terrific"—these are the pathetic limits of our descriptive powers, whether we are looking at a motorbike or a Michelangelo. I once said in casual conversation that a certain Beethoven sonata was "nourishing"—which it is—and two strangers looked at me as if I were crazy.

We have inherited the most magnificent organ for human expression that the world has known since Attic Greek—and we use it to play scales with. English combines the preciseness of German, the mellifluence of Italian, the subtlety of French, and the dignity of Latin—and we make less coherence than a dog barking for his bone.

Unless we speak well, we cannot think well; there are no thoughts without words. The paucity of our intellectual life does not arise from a lack of brains but from a lack of words to formulate and understand our feelings. How can we expect our children to learn foreign languages in school when they, like us, can scarcely speak English?

Slow down and live well

Stuart Rosenberg

Three there are who would do well to underplay their overdone, frenetic zeal.

The first of the trio may be conveniently dubbed as Mr. Over-Aggressive. We find him everywhere we go. He's forever fussing, fueding and fuming. His shirts are never laundered right; his coffee's never hot enough. He vows vengeance on the whole drycleaning industry and upon all of the world's poor and unsupecting waiters. He makes the mistake of assuming that he has been made the special, supreme target of all assorted inadequacies. For, after all, the earth is his and the fulness thereof. His life is eloquent testimony to stored-up aggressions which he makes no attempt to control, subdue or sublimate. He has never learned to be still and contemplate, to think rather than grunt. He might live longer himself if he were willing to let others live longer.

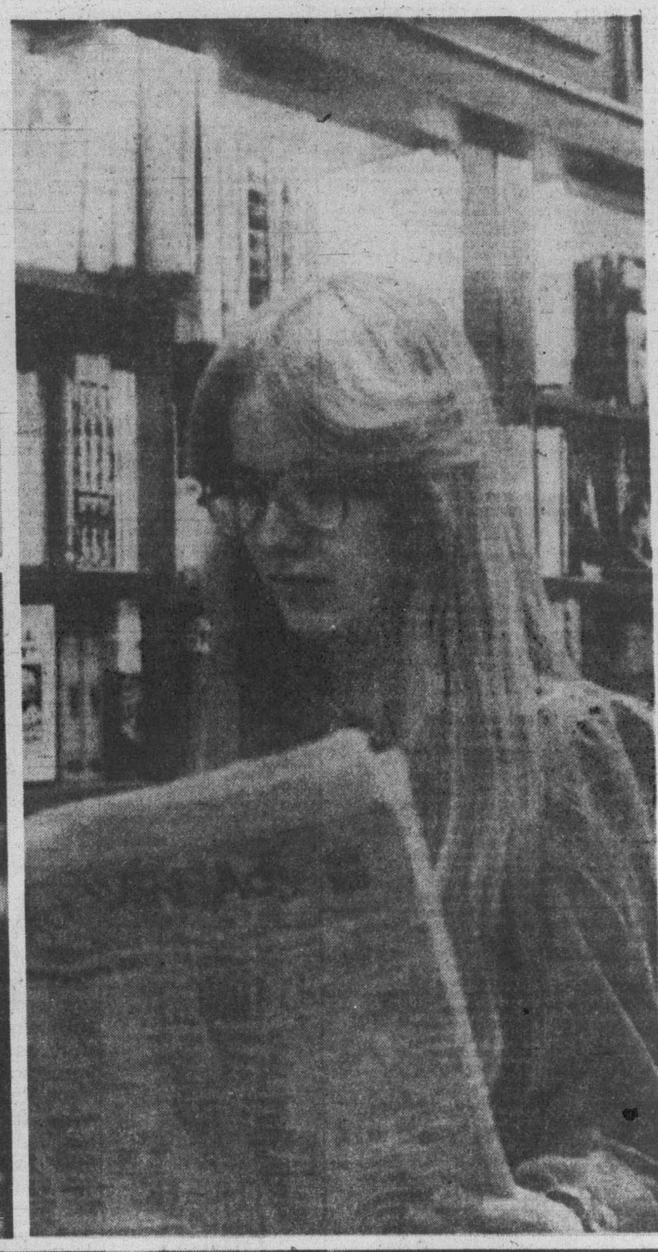

The over-competitive man is our next victim of excess. Competition, of itself, need not destroy our values or our hearts. If it is not the total measure of our life's work, competition can spur us without injury. Success comes to those who learn how to work with people, and not against them. But when we are consumed with a passion to win all the time, we must slowly go down the road to self-destruction. Jealousy and hate are the twin products of the resentment of others harbored by the over-competitive man. He believes that he can achieve victory only when the other fellow loses. But life is filled with victories which are really defeats, and losses which may become gains. If we refuse to co-operate with life's inexorable logic and unnecessarily insist upon competing all the time, we have lost the race long before it begins.

The third victim of immaturity is the man who never grows up — he thinks that the only way to remain active is to be over-active. And so he is constantly running, proving himself, and impressing others with his stgrength and prowess: But to grow old is not a sin; it is an art. There comes a time in life when we need no longer behave like children in order to prove how youthful we are. One of the signs of immature youth is its consistent insistence upon action for action's sake. Maturity knows what not to do; it has already outgrown the stage of frantic doing and is quite prepared to let the more foolish burn out their physical machines in exciting but empty whirlagigging. Wise men remain active; they avoid being overactive, and thus frantic.

To those who would grow: Stop being over-aggressive, over-competitive, overactive! Overdoing makes you grow down, not up!

NOW HIRING
A lawyer goes to school for 7 years, an accountant for 5 years and an appraiser takes a 3-year course. A realtor should have a good working knowledge of all of the above and a 3-month correspondence course is not adequate. WALL and REDEKOP has a continuing educational program designed to equip sales people with the knowledge and skill necessary for a successful selling career. This is a practical course based on actual field experience and is available to approved candidates. Call now for a personal interview.

THE ACES® ON BRIDGE

by IRA G. CORN JR.
TEAM CAPTAIN

The 1977 Intercollegiate Bridge Championships, sponsored by the Charity Foundation of the American Contract Bridge League, included competitors from 14 U.S. colleges and universities. The winners, representing Pennsylvania's Swarthmore College, were Marty Fleisher (18) and Alan Heubert (22), both of Teaneck, N.J. Finishing second, representing Washington University, St. Louis, were Bill Doroshow (22), San Francisco and Robert Portnoy (19), St. Louis. In third place, representing Harvard University, were Arthur Moore (25) and Eric Robinson (20), both of N.Y.C.

The winners displayed some of their defensive technique in today's interesting game played by Purdue University.

Using standard methods, South would open two no trump and North would raise to game. The pair from Purdue used a strong and artificial club opening which resulted in the bidding shown.

West led the spade deuce and declarer called for dummy's eight. Fleisher (East), unflinchingly played low and declarer made the reasonable play of the ace. Had East erred and played the spade king, declarer would have had an easy time by conceding a trick to West's club king and then using dummy's spade queen as an entry to dummy's clubs. After East's paralyzing duck, declarer took his best chance and played his ace, hoping that West had the spade king so that dummy would have an entry in spades.

Aftering winning the spade ace, declarer played the ace and queen of clubs and West took the third round with the club king. West shifted to a diamond, trapping dummy's queen and East's ten forced declarer's ace. Declarer tried to reach dummy with the spade queen, but when East won the king the roof caved in. A low spade put Opening lead: Deuce of spades.

West back on play to cash two more spades and another diamond lead through dummy's queen produced two more diamond tricks.

The winners earned $2,500 in unrestricted academic scholarships for Swarthmore. All other competing schools were awarded $500 each.

Nanaimo parks-recreation body putting together bid for Games

NANAIMO — A special subcommittee of the Parks and Recreation Commission will put together this city's application to play host to the 1978 B.C. Summer Games.

The committee will meet next week, to have Nanaimo's application ready by the Sept. 21 deadline.

A letter from Ron Butlin, managing director of the games, told communities that wish to apply that the proposals should be planned around existing sports facilities.

Appointed to the committee for the summer games were commissioners Peter Littlewood, Frank Crane, Dick Reiber, Jean MacKay and Judy Beldsoe.

In other business handled at the Tuesday night meeting of the commission, it was agreed to ask for restrictions to be placed on Green and Diver lakes.

Commissioners met with an official of the municipal affairs department in August, and were told that the two lakes would qualify for the restrictions.

Power boats on the lake would be restricted to only those with battery-powered motors.

The commission agreed to make formal application to have the restrictions imposed.

The commission will also ask to restrict boats and water skiing on Long Lake. Boats and water skiers would be restricted to the hours of 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and skiers would be kept out of the narrow, south end of the lake.

The move to have a member of the Nanaimo regional board sit on the city's parks and recreation commission has created a meeting-date puzzle.

The regional board meets on the second and fourth Tuesday of the month, as does the commission.

Appointment of a regional director to the commission had been sought because the city and region now have a contract for the city to operate the regional Beban Park complex.

The commission will consider moving its meetings to the first and third Tuesdays, when the entire commission is available to discuss the change.

Word on the commission's proposed master plan could come next week, with the commission planning this week to interview consultants who have applied to work on the plan. A decision on the plan could come next Tuesday.

Five consulting companies have applied to work on the parks and recreation master plan.

In other business, the commission approved the sending to tender of the $30,000 project to rebuild the Lions Lacrosse box, and accepted the appointment by the city of Dick Reiber as commissioner to fill the unexpired term of Glen Johnston.

Meter idea rejected

NANAIMO — Senior citizens, and other citizens with low incomes, will have to keep saving their nickels and dimes, for the time being.

Nanaimo city council this week briefly considered a motion that would have given free meter parking to senior citizens, but rejected the idea as impractical.

Proposer of the motion, Ald. Nelson Allen, was not in attendance at the meeting, due to a family funeral, but Ald. Gino Sedola said that he would propose the motion, and amend it to read that all people of low income should be exempt from putting their nickles and dimes in the parking meters.

But other council members soon convinced even Sedola that it was a futile exercise.

Changes in police department

City inspector retires

Inspector Walter Calwell retired Wednesday after nearly 32 years with the Victoria City Police Department. He is 56.

Calwell joined the department in Decermber, 1945, after three years in the Canadian Army. He was promoted to inspector five years ago.

His father, also named Walter and also an inspector at the time of his retirement in 1945, was on the city police force for 36 years.

With Calwell's retirement, Lorne Shandley, 51, moves into the position of inspector with the patrol division. He joined the force in July, 1946.

Moving into Shandley's position of sergeant with the patrol division is Doug Richardson, who joined the department in June, 1967.

Richardson was cited at this week's police board meeting for his handling of an armed person found in a downtown sporting goods store Aug. 2.

Provincial COURT

Only the accused's lawyer saved him from the jail term he deserved, according to Judge R. B. Allan in Victoria Provincial Court Wednesday.

"I think this is the sort of offence which ought to be dealt with by a jail sentence," Alder said after Leonard P. Morberg, 18, pleaded guilty to a charge of wilful damage involving an apartment door May 29.

Nine out of 10 judges would have jailed anyone who while on probation took "a gang of thugs" along to smash up a place to collect a debt. Allan said, prior to sentencing.

Morberg was placed on six months probation, ordered to make restitution for the damaged door and fined $500 or in default two months jail, "which is what I would have given you."

The court was told that Morberg was intoxicated at the time. His lawyer told the court his client had since moved to Vernon to live with his father to escape harmful influences in Victoria. Morberg has a job clearing bush for a forestry company at a camp near Mica Creek.

A fraternal fracas cost two brothers $150 each in provincial court after both pleaded guilty to charges of causing a disturbance by fighting.

The court was told that when police arrived at the 500-block Yates on the night of Aug. 19 they found Daniel, 23, and Frederick Short, 25, both of 804 Esquimalt, in a fighting stance. According to witnesses, the two had been in that position for some time.

Counsel for the accused told the court both were intoxicated and neither could later recall why they were fighting.

"They usually get along together," he said.

After fining both, Allan said "... maybe next time the fight will be shorter and not on the street."

One of three inmates said to have escaped by swimming from William Head Prison July 15 elected trial by magistrate and entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of escaping from lawful custody.

Ronald J. Tupholme, 28, was remanded to Sept. 7 so a date could be set for his trial.

Tupholme was arrested in Ontario Aug. 20. Alain Joseph Lalumière, 22, is still at large while the body of Michael Lloyd Armstrong was found floating in the water off the prison Aug. 13.

Attendants reach air pact

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada and its 3,000 flight attendants reached a tentative contract settlement Wednesday after a federal conciliation commissioner succeeded in clearing away some of the contentious issues which had blocked an agreement for four months.

Commissioner Murray Dubinsky of Winnipeg declined to divulge any details of the contract until the Canadian Air Line Flight Attendants Association has informed its Air Canada members of the terms.

The union asked last week for an 11-per-cent wage increase in a one-year contract retroactive to last June 30, while the company offered increases ranging from 5.5 to six per cent. The average annual wage for cabin personnel is $14,000, the union said.

Weak Ottawa backs Inuit

Allmand trying to arrange meeting

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has lent moral support to Quebec Inuit (Eskimos) but does not appear to have the power to regulate the natives' dispute with Quebec over language legislation.

However, a spokesman for Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said Wednesday the minister was trying to arrange a meeting with Quebec government and Inuit officials to resolve the problem.

A time and place for the meeting may be known by today.

Quebec Premier Rene Levesque agreed Tuesday to meet with Inuit representatives but criticized the federal government, saying it was financially supporting the Inuit in thier protests against the language legislation.

Inuit have held demonstrations in northern communities and cut water and garbage collection services to government offices. So far, no violence has erupted.

The federal government has in turn criticized the Quebec government for "heavy-handed" tactics in dealing with the natives.

Allmand released a statement Wednesday saying he "supports the Northern Quebec Inuit Association in its struggle by democratic means against Quebec Bill 101 to preserve and promote Inuit language and culture."

Allmand said he had asked the Quebec government to withdraw special police units sent to northern communities, but the request was denied.

The minister said that to his knowledge he had no authority to order their withdrawal nor the removal of Quebec employees.

Inuit leaders have asked both the police and provincial public servants to leave.

However, the James Bay agreement — a land claims settlement involving Quebec and northern natives — is under federal jurisdiction and has become linked to the language legislation.

Various linguistic and cultural guarantees for natives in the language legislation apply only to those who signed the James Bay agreement.

The agreement has not yet received royal assent, although Nov. 11 has been tentatively set for that final ceremony to make the agreement law.

Allmand still stands by a threat to delay royal proclamation until the dispute is settled in northern Quebec.

At a news conference Wednesday, Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark said the federal government should take Quebec to court if the language legislation reduces natives' linguistic rights.

Clark also renewed a request for a study of the constitutionality of the language legislation, possibly resulting ina court challenge.

Prime Minister Trudeau earlier promised to investigate the constitutionality of Quebec's language legislation, which promotes the use of French and limits the use of English, once it was passed. The bill received third and final reading in the Quebec national assembly Friday.

The federal cabinet would discuss the legislation at its next meeting, Postmaster-General Jean Jacques Blais said last week.

Yukon drilling okay despite native views

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has approved drilling of an oil well in the Northern Yukon despite strong objections from a native group.

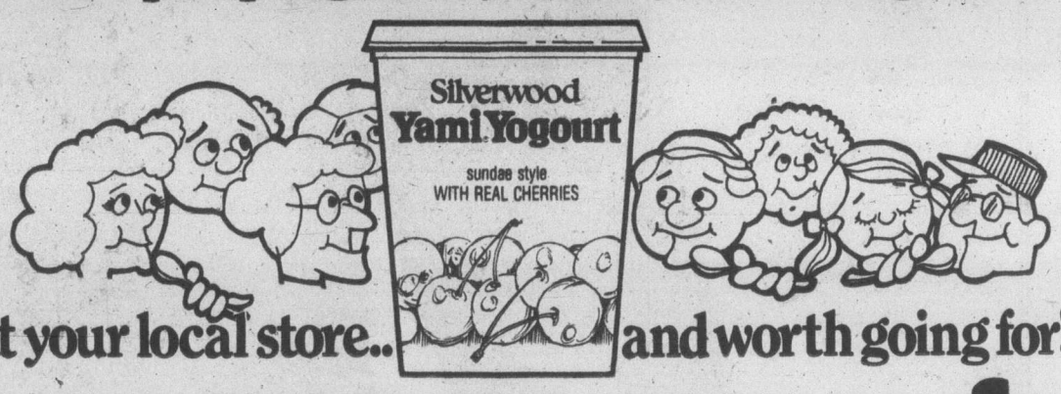

Northern Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said in a statement Wednesday that Aquitaine Co. of Canada Ltd., a French-owned firm, will be allowed to drill the well "under strict environmental controls."

The well will be drilled on the Eagle Plain, about 150 miles southeast of the Loucheu Indian community of Old Crow.

The Council of Yukon Indians says the community is worried that the drilling will disturb the winter grazing area of the Porcupine Caribou herd, the last major concentration of the animals on the Continent.

The council's claims negotiator for the Old Crow area, Grafton Njootli, said he had asked Ottawa for a one-month delay in the decision.

Grad to be aboard

They call it "graduation" and it's all in fun. But to the children who are leaving the Fairfield Day Care Centre some after two years — it's an important occasion. Off on an imaginary cruise to higher education in this landbound boat Wednesday are (clockwise from front): Rebecca Coss, Brad Duggan, Angie Turford, Maryanne Clark, Miko Bruce. The "diplomas" they are clutching include one letter telling them how great they are and another telling teachers in the "big school" (elementary) what to expect next week.

U.S. skipper sought in 'abduction'

Fisheries official had to jump

Police on both sides of the Canada-United States border were searching Wednesday for the captain of a U.S. seiner after a Canadian fisheries officer said he was abducted in an incident on Juan de Fuca Strait last week.

RCMP Sgt. Ed Kokoska said the FBI had been called in to assist in the search because Canadian efforts to locate the seiner, the Lucky Star, had failed.

Kokoskas said the fishboat, although registered at Kodiak, Alaska, was believed to be somewhere in Washington state waters.

He said the captain was wanted for questioning in connection with an incident Aug. 24 when the fisheries patrol boat Laurier caught an American seiner allegedly fishing in Canadian waters off Port Renfrew, about 30 miles west of here.

Kokoska said Laurier quartermaster Butch Mayo prepared to board the seiner to place the captain under arrest and escort the vessel into port. But just prior to Mayo's boarding, the seiner and the Laurier were involved in a collision.

Fisheries officials said the collision occurred when Laurier captain Jack Goss positioned his vessel in front of the bow of the seiner to prevent it from escaping.

Some damage was done to the seiner along its port bulwarks but the Laurier was unharmed and Mayo boarded the vessel.

The fisheries spokesman said the captain of the seiner warned Mayo that once he came aboard, all he would get is a one-way trip to the U.S.

The spokesman said the seiner then hauled its nets and "sort of jogged towards the boundary."

When it crossed the border, the spokesman said Goss sent out a rubber lifeboat to retrieve Mayo.

But the seiner refused to stop when the lifeboat pulled alongside, and Mayo had to jump while both boats were moving.

Kokoska said charges were contemplated against the captain.

Mike Entler, FBI special agent, said Tuesday in Seattle that the bureau would help the RCMP, even though no U.S. laws were broken.

Fraser murders suspect charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP said Wednesday they had charged a 23-year-old Chilliwack man with four counts of first degree murder in the July 18 shooting of four Agassiz-area teenagers on Ferry Island in the Fraser River.

Inspector Les Homes told a news conference that Walter Murray Madsen was charged in Chilliwack after being arrested Tuesday without a struggle at his home.

In Chilliwack, Madsen stood silently in provincial court as he was charged with the murder of Evert Den Hertog, 19, of Rosedale, his brother John, 16, and Clearbrook teenagers Bert Menger, 19, and Leola Guliker, 16.

The four were drinking beer in a small recreation area by the Fraser River, 70 miles east of Vancouver, when a man came out of the woods with a rifle and opened fire. Only Ed Menger, 15, escaped to alert police.

Madsen was remanded to Friday in custody and without plea to give him an opportunity to retain counsel. Observers said the accused is about six feet tall with short, light-colored hair.

Homes said police had no theories as to a motive for the shootings and said he was not aware that Madsen had any criminal record.

The search for the suspect was one of the largest in Lower Mainland history, but led to scores of dead ends despite the hundreds of tips provided to police by the public. Police said at one point they had investigated and eliminated 200 suspects.

Ed Menger told police the gunman levelled his weapon and fired a shot. Menger said he jumped up and fled, but heard more shots behind him as he ran.

When he reached the highway, he flagged down a passing car and called police from the nearest farmhouse. Police who rushed to the scene found no sign of the four other youths, but noted that their

Korean lobbyist indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury has returned a secret indictment against Tongsun Park, a central figure in the investigation of alleged South Korean influence-buying in Congress, the Washingon Post reports.

Park, a Korean-born, Washington-based businessman, fled after the investigation began last fall and was last reported to be in South Korea, which has no extradition treaty with the United States.

The Post says the sealed indictment on an unknown charge was filed last Friday in the court of U.S. District Judge John Pratt here.

A U.S. justice department spokesman declined comment on the story. Pratt told a reporter that he had received sealed grand jury indictments but that he did not know what they contained. Asked whether Park was among them, the judge said: "I know nothing about it."

Sources with the House of Representatives ethics committee said they also knew nothing about the reported indictment.

That kms to a million

British Columbia taxpayers will spend around $1 million for the right to call miles kilometres.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser told a news conference Wednesday it would cost almost $710,000 to convert B.C.'s 25,000 highway signs plus $350,000 to educate the public to the change.

The costs do not include local costs as municipal governments change their signs to metric. The taxpayer picks up that tab, too.

Of the 25,000 highway signs slated for the change, 15,000 are speed limit signs and 10,000 are distance signs. Another 8,000 signs — rail crossings, stop signs, etc., don't require conversion.

The advertising campaign will be run by the Vancoever firm of Walker, Ricks, Ehring limited. It includes newspaper, radio and television advertising, some of which is already running, and a brochure mailed to all 900,000 households in the province.

The switch to kilometres from miles starts today with school zones first on the conversion list. It will take about three weeks to make the complete change.

Fraser said that while the new signs and limits are legal and enforceable as soon as they are posted "we feel the police will use discretion for the first little while."

In Namibia

Pretoria taking port

PRETORIA (Reuter) — The South African government announced that beginning today the Atlantic port of Walvis Bay will cease to be part of South-West Africa (Namibia) and will belong to South Africa.

A proclamation said it was expedient and desirable that Walvis Bay, the only deep-water harbor on the barren and dangerous Southwest African coast, be administered as part of South Africa's Cape province. The Cape border is 400 miles from the port.

The change of status for Walvis Bay is linked to plans to give independence to the disputed territory of South-West Africa, administered by South Africa in defiance of the United Nations which says Pretoria's rule is illegal.

The UN-backed South-West African Peoples Organization, which is fighting a limited bush war against South African rule, has demanded that Walvis Bay remain part of the territory.

Smith appears sure of two-thirds margin

SALISBURY — Prime Minister Ian Smith retained control of parliament in Rhodesia's general election, and when vote-counting paused late Wednesday appeared certain of the two-thirds majority he needs to negotiate a racial settlement on his own terms.

Partial results of balloting by the mostly white electorate gave Smith's Rhodesian Front party 38 of the 44 seats he needs for a two-thirds majority in the House of Assembly. Returns from rural areas, where Smith is strong, were expected today.

There are 66 seats in the house, 50 reserved for whites.

Smith's party held 38 seats before the election, which he called in an attempt to obtain the 44-seat bloc that will enable him to make constitutional changes.

Such changes would allow him to work out a power-sharing arrangement with moderates in Rhodesia's black majority and resist an Anglo-American plan that is reported to call for his ouster and disbanding of Rhodesia's white-led armed forces.

Late Wednesday, Smith reiterated his intention to seek talks with local leaders not linked to black guerrillas who since 1972 have been fighting to topple his government. None of the moderate black leaders, however, has yet agreed to meet with Smith.

Smith said he already was looking forward to the next step in his plans for the country's future — a meeting today with British Foreign Secretary David Owen and Andrew Young, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Owen and Young are reported to be carrying plans for Smith's resignation to make

Pages to keep jobs for now

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

The revolt of the legislative pages is over and the teenage boys and girls who run errands for MLAs are back on the job until the end of the current sitting.

And nobody appears to know how far away that date is.

The house will adjourn this afternoon at least until Tuesday, but after that it's anybody's guess.

Speaker Ed Smith said the dismissal of the pages wasn't as harsh as it first appeared and that they weren't really "fired" at all.

Spokesman for the 14 pages, George Cessford, 15, agreed that there had been considerable misunderstanding on both sides.

Tuesday the pages were informed by Sergeant-at-Arms A. M. Hutchinson that their services would not be required after Wednesday's sitting.

A subsequent row in the Legislature over the way the pages were being told to go back to school led to a 50-minute meeting between Smith, the pages and Hutchinson.

Following the meeting, Cessford said he felt justice had been done, the pages assured they could continue at their posts until the house rises for its summer, fall or winter break and "it was largely a misunderstanding, I guess," he said.

The pages' revolt began Aug. 17 when, through Cessford, they complained that their heavy blue serge uniforms with high-necked collars were oppressive during a heat wave.

That protest brought them some notoriety, raised eyebrows and no relief.

When they were told to pack their bags Tuesday, they

Zambia 'bombed' by jets after Rhodesian clash

LUSAKA (Reuter) — Zambia said Rhodesian jet aircraft bombed Zambian territory Wednesday near the Zambian border town of Feira.

A government spokesman said the raid came after an exchange of fire between Rhodesian and Zambian troops near Feira, which is close to the borders with Rhodesia and Mozambique.

The statement came three days after President Kenneth Kaunda had publicly predicted that Zambia would come under air attack shortly.

You might be hostages, warn Inuit

FORT CHIMO, Que. (CP) Eskimo leaders warned Quebec government employees at a meeting here Wednesday they may use "some form of hostage-taking" if the civil servants do not leave town immediately.

Leaders of the Joint Community Councils of the Ungava and Hudson Coasts hinted at the meeting that if the employees did not leave soon, they may be prevented from leaving and would, in effect, become hostages.

● Ottawa tepidly backing Inuit. Page 43

"If you don't leave now, when you do want to leave, we might not let you go," the Inuit were reported to have told the employees. But they added that no force or violence would be used "under any circumstances."

The Inuit did not say how they would carry out any action against the employees without using violence, but told them in what was described as uncharacteristically strong language to "pack and get out."

The meeting was conducted in Inuktituk, with everything translated into English and some of the talk re-translated into French.

It was the first time the two sides in the dispute had met face-to-face since the Inuit cut off water to government employees more than one week ago.

Charlie Tukalug, the delegate from Great Whale River, 700 miles north of here on the Hudson Bay coast, voiced the meeting's recurrent theme.

He said the Inuit were friends with the French until the Quebec government passed its language law, a law that he said would destroy the 4,000 Inuit of the province.

The traditional Inuit politeness is "a thing of the past," said Wally Makiak, the interpreter at the meeting, "our patience has run out."

Each of the 35 delegates took their turn at hammering the point home— "Leave the North until the language law is changed."

Raoul St. Julien, the senior Quebec government official here, unsuccessfully tried to explain that the government had the sole responsibility to order their employees home. He said he is awaiting an order from his superiors.

Policy mapped on waterfront

By DONNA REIMER
Colonist Correspondent

NANAIMO — A wide-ranging waterfront policy has been proposed for the city of Nanaimo, that would guarantee the public's access to the entire waterfront.

The policy, which has been proposed by the city's Parks and Recreation Commission special committee on waterfront, was adopted in principle by the commission Tuesday night.

Now it will be considered for revision before being finally adopted, and sent on to city council.

The proposed policy covers both saltwater and freshwater beaches and foreshore.

It was prompted by applications for foreshore leases from waterfront property owners whose houses encroach on public property.

The committee decided that little could be done about existing encroachments, but that steps could be taken to prevent future extensions of private property onto public lands.

Three of the committee's recommendations were finally adopted and passed on to city council, to deal with the pending applications for foreshore leases.

The committee recommended that the city donate the land involved in the encroachments to be leased to the property owners, but that the property owners must agree to the building of a waterfront promenade or walkway in front of their property, if the city chooses to do so in the future.

The committee also made recommendations so that waterfront accesses would not be blocked by the encroachments.

The committee said that although many of the beach encroachments have been unwittingly inherited by the present property owners, "it must be clearly recognized that the expropriation of public land for private use is a theft and ignorance of the law."

"Only custom makes this offence more socially acceptable than shoplifting and bankrobbery."

The committee suggested a waterfront officer assist the commission in enforcing the waterfront regulations, which now are the responsibility of several jurisdictions, and often difficult to enforce.

They recommended that any suspected encroachment on the foreshore be referred to the committee for investigation, and that applications for foreshore leases also be referred to the committee.

A survey of all of the city's waterfront should be done, the committee said, so that future encroachments could be recognized.

Boat docks are a special type of encroachment, the committee said, since they restrict access across the foreshore. Property owners should be required to build stairs, or other access around the boat docks, the report said.

Signs, such as "trespassers will be prosecuted," are sometimes misleadingly placed, so that it appears that shoreline, beach or access is private, the report said, and such signs should be removed.

Some of the committee's specific recommendations are sure to bring protests from waterfront property owners, who have protested similar suggestions in the past.

One recommendation is that a walkway be provided between Departure Bay and the B.C. Ferries dock, a suggestion that met resistance from property owners along that stretch of waterfront several years ago.

Other specific recommendations:

- That the commission ask city council to require provision for waterfront promenades in front of all future subdivisions of waterfront.
- That all public waterfront accesses be opened up and signs placed at both ends.
- That year-round access be provided to Newcastle Island.
- That all waterfront recreational areas be regularly monitored for pollution.
- That the commission produce a pamphlet with a map showing the location of waterfront recreational shoreline and beaches and their accesses.

In a related matter, the commission voted to use funds intended for park development in Departure Bay to mark and improve beach accesses in that area.

Commissioner for Departure Bay, Judy Bledsoe, told the commission that she felt the people of the area put a higher priority on developing the beach accesses rather than the park. Some $10,000 had been earmarked for the development of Wardroper Park, which is near several other parks at Departure Bay.

The commission also considered a proposed policy for Westwood Lake, a city-owned man-made lake.

The committee report said that Westwood Lake is in danger of being ruined by developers, and that the city should exercise its rights along the lake's shoreline.

Normally, freshwater lakes are not public along their foreshore, as is saltwater, but because the city owns Westwood Lake, it has rights to the foreshore.

But, the report said, private property owners are putting up boat docks and no-trespassing signs, and making the public feel they have no right along the foreshore.

Nanaimo parks-recreation body putting together bid for Games

NANAIMO — A special subcommittee of the Parks and Recreation Commission will put together this city's application to play host to the 1978 B.C. Summer Games.

The committee will meet next week, to have Nanaimo's application ready by the Sept. 21 deadline.

A letter from Ron Butlin, managing director of the games, told communities that wish to apply that the proposals should be planned around existing sports facilities.

Appointed to the committee for the summer games were commissioners Peter Littlewood, Frank Crane, Dick Reiber, Jean MacKay and Judy Beldsoe.

In other business handled at the Tuesday night meeting of the commission, it was agreed to ask for restrictions to be placed on Green and Diver lakes.

Commissioners met with an official of the municipal affairs department in August, and were told that the two lakes would qualify for the restrictions.

Power boats on the lake would be restricted to only those with battery-powered motors.

The commission agreed to make formal application to have the restrictions imposed.

The commission will also ask to restrict boats and water skiing on Long Lake. Boats and water skiers would be restricted to the hours of 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. and skiers would be kept out of the narrow, south end of the lake.

The move to have a member of the Nanaimo regional board sit on the city's parks and recreation commission has created a meeting-date puzzle.

The regional board meets on the second and fourth Tuesday of the month, as does the commission.

Appointment of a regional director to the commission had been sought because the city and region now have a contract for the city to operate the regional Beban Park complex.

The commission will consider moving its meetings to the first and third Tuesdays, when the entire commission is available to discuss the change.

Word on the commission's proposed master plan could come next week, with the commission planning this week to interview consultants who have applied to work on the plan. A decision on the plan could come next Tuesday.

Five consulting companies have applied to work on the parks and recreation master plan.

In other business, the commission approved the sending to tender of the $30,000 project to rebuild the Lions Lacrosse box, and accepted the appointment by the city of Dick Reiber as commissioner to fill the unexpired term of Glen Johnston.

Free parking meters rejected as futile idea

NANAIMO — Senior citizens, and other citizens with low incomes, will have to keep saving their nickels and dimes, for the time being.

Nanaimo city council this week briefly considered a motion that would have given free meter parking to senior citizens, but rejected the idea as impractical.

Proposer of the motion, Ald. Nelson Allen, was not in attendance at the meeting, due to a family funeral, but Ald. Gino Sedola said that he would propose the motion, and amend it to read that all people of low income should be exempt from putting their nickles and dimes in the parking meters.

But other council members soon convinced even Sedola that it was a futile exercise. Citizens with incomes so low they couldn't afford the nickles and dimes for meters wouldn't be able to afford cars either, they pointed out.

Council agreed to defeat the motion, and decided to put their efforts toward improving and lowering the cost of bus services instead.

Qualicum airport's continuing dilemma

To fly high or just putter along, that's the question

By JOHN LANGTON
Colonist Correspondent

QUALICUM BEACH — There hs been a great deal of activity and development at the Qualicum airport, due mainly to the relentless efforts of some of the pilots and others who have not allowed the many frustrations to dampen their enthusiasm.

Countless attempts have been made to improve the gravel runway. An aeroclub has been formed and now is operating a flying school. Hangars have been built. There are scheduled and charter flight services. On occasions flarepots are put alongside the strip so planes can land after dark.

The runway has a gravel strip and flying rocks have done tens of thousands of dollars worth of damage to planes. Members of the Parksville-Qualicum Aero Club have spent many hours removing rocks. People have donated gravel and rolled the strip, but still the problem persists.

After the airport had been licensed, the Qualicum Beach village council, which owns the facility, and the aero club worked hard to get a $175,000 federal government grant for paving.

The government attached several conditions, some of which could not be met. There was a public outcry against the paving because a number of local residents are opposed to development of the airport. They fear it would greatly increase air traffic and noise.

The $175,000 grant was never made, so pilots continued to pick rocks and pay expensive repair bills.

Rocks, blown by propellers, chip the edges of the props so that they resemble badly-blunted axes with nicks. These throw the props off balance, put a strain on the engines and also cut down the efficiency of the props. Nicks can be filed out a few times, then the whole prop has to be replaced, and this costs several thousand dollars on the larger planes.

Sheet metal is also damaged and has to be patched or replaced.

Now another attempt is being made to halt the flying rocks. Last week, 1,000 yards of gravel was obtained, free of charge, from the government pit on Clark Road. It was trucked to the airport early one morning because of the extreme forest fire hazard.

Use of the trucks was free and the drivers donated their time, but there were unexpected complications. Residents near the airport strongly objected to the trucks which, some said, were travelling at 60 miles per hour, and making lots of noise at 4:30 a.m.

The pilots in charge of the operation tried to remedy the situation by sending the trucks around a circuitous route and bulldozing a temporary entrance to the airstrip. The residents on the new route also complained.

Some phoned embarrassed members of the village council who, they discovered, had not been told anything about the project. Even Ald. Arthur Skipsey, chairman of the airport committee, had not been told. The ministry of transport knew nothing of the project either.

The rocks will be hand-picked by volunteers from the gravel which has been spread alongside the airstrip. The gravel will then be mixed with oil, spread on the runway and rolled in the same way that cold mix is applied to blacktop some roads in Qualicum.

During a hastily-called meeting of the Qualicum Beach village council, approval was given to this makeshift solution to the flying rocks, although it will not come up to standards of the ministry of transport. Bill Sutherland, the municipality's works superintendent, will supervise the project.

Ald. Mary Parker and Ald. Arthur Olson opposed the project because it does not meet government specifications, and there is some doubt that it will even last the winter. If it breaks up, the surface will be even worse than it is now, stated Olson.

He asked who would be responsible if an accident should occur. Nobody could answer for sure.

Ald. Skipsey said if the surface is not successful, a grader can easily push the whole lot to one side and leave the original gravel surface.

John Molliet, who has arranged much of the project, said it will not cost taxpayers a penny. Material and services that are not donated will be paid for by airport users.

He said the final result of the project will depend on how wet the materials are when they are applied.

There has been a sudden break in the weather and the gravel now is soaked, and nothing further has been done. Ald. Skipsey said there is usually an Indian summer so maybe the job can be done then.

The federal government grant that was lost hinged upon the village council obtaining flightway easements over certain properties close to the ends of the airstrip.

The village council and the flying club tried hard to get the easements which would permit work crews to go onto the properties and cut down or top trees which grew too high for the safety of planes using the airport.

Some owners were prepared to grant the easements, others would not. On several occasions, unidentified persons have gone onto private property without permission, and blasted down or cut down a large number of trees close to the airport.

Ald. Skipsey has been a prime mover in getting a new location for the airport because the present one has limitations to development because of its location close to Qualicum Beach. It is close to residential areas and the length of the strip cannot be increased much beyond the present 2,500 feet.

MOT officials have approved a site located between Coombs and Parksville and estimated it would cost $1.4 million to develop. This is far beyond the means of Qualicum Beach so improvements are being made to the present airport.

One member of the Parksville-Qualicum Aero Club said the proposed location would not be popular with Qualicum Beach residents because the village would be right under the approach to the airstrip.

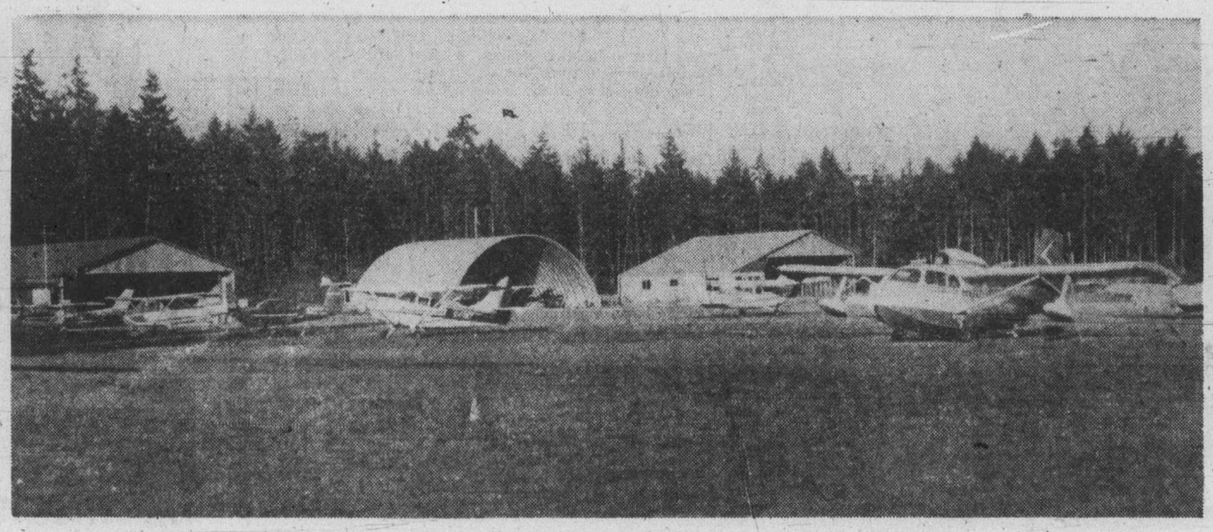

Getting the airstrip paved is just one of the projects of the pilots and others using the Qualicum airport.

Back in the early 1950s, the Qualicum Beach Rotary Club cleared a strip in the bush, just east of the village, and that was the start of the airport. For many years nothing much happened there except for a few planes coming and going.

Once the Parksville-Qualicum Aero Club got active, it built a club house and promoted flying.

The village council, after years of frustrating attempts, got the ministry of transport to license the airport and that opened the way for commercial airlines to operate scheduled and charter services.

The Aero Club, with village council approval, arranged for a resident caretaker to live in a mobile home at the airport. The club also installed tie-downs.

It's all in the way you hold your mouth

Fourth-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina bites on his tongue as he goes after a shot during opening-day match in U.S. Open tennis championships. Vilas had little trouble of disposing of Manuel Santana of Spain as he recorded his seventh straight victory in tournament play. (Story elsewhere on this page.)

Slimmest of margins gives Burrards title

VANCOUVER — Victoria Shamrocks gave it all they had Wednesday night but so did Vancouver Burrards and the Mainlanders won the honor of representing the West in the Mann Cup.

Rallying in the third period for the third straight game, the Burrards denied the Shamrocks their first Mann Cup final berth in 20 years by scoring a 12-11 triumph before a standing-room only crowd of 2,975 at Kerrisdale Arena.

Vancouver won the last three games to take the best-of-seven series, 4-3, and will host Brampton Excelsiors in the best-of-seven national championship which starts Saturday at Kerrisdale.

Either team would have been a deserving winner of the WLA final which was one of the closest and most exciting in league history.

In the first six games only one goal separated the teams with Victoria scoring 61 goals to Vancouver's 60. The Shamrocks won the opener 11-10, the second game, 10-9 and the fourth game 11-9. Vancouver took the third game 9-8, the fifth game 12-11 and the sixth game 11-10.

Each game was a thriller featuring brilliant goaltending and shooting and outstanding defensive play. The seventh game was no exception.

Vancouver held early leads of 1-0 and 2-1 but Dave Thomson tied it at 2-2 with a 30-foot scoring shot at 6:20 of the first period and the Burrards weren't to lead again until Rico Bellusci scored late in the third period to make it 11-10.

The Shamrocks got a great opportunity to force overtime when the Burrards' Ron Pinder was penalized with 1:57 remaining but they couldn't beat goalkeeper Dave Evans, who was named the outstanding player in the series, and with 42 seconds remaining took a penalty for having too many men on the floor to lose the advantage.

With about 20 seconds remaining Dave Tasker, who scored four goals for a total of nine in the last two games, scored on a delayed penalty to seemingly seal the victory. But Victoria wouldn't quit and Ron MacNeil scored with eight seconds remaining. Norm Baker won the ensuing faceoff but the Shamrocks couldn't get a decent shot in the time remaining.

Evans made 42 saves and Larry Smeltzer was equally sharp in the Victoria net, making 41 saves, and both were helped by the goalposts as each team hit the piping on numerous occasions.

Victoria lead 5-2 after one period and was up by 8-4 midway through the second period but Pat Ryan and Pinder scored on Shamrock defensive lapses to make it 8-6 after two periods.

Ryan scored at 9:56 of the third period to tie it at 9-9 and Victoria gained the lead for the last time when Dan Green scored 13 seconds later.

Steve Buckley, recruited from the junior "A" Victoria McDonalds, led the Irish with three goals while Baker, Ivan Thompson, who scored the only shorthanded goal of the contest, MacNeil, Green, Thomson, Joe McCrea and Mike Beaulac counted singles.

As through the entire series there were few altercations in the game and both teams took 19 minutes in penalties and counted one powerplay goal each.

The Shamrocks, several of whom hoped to play in the Mann Cup and then retire, took defeat hard and after the game a few who were unhappy with some of the officiating verbally accosted referee Ron Masson.

The Burrards, who last played in the Mann Cup in 1975, have now beaten the long-suffering Shamrocks in for straight playoff series. Last year they upset the league champion Shamrocks in seven games in the semi-finals, winning the deciding game by one goal.

Nettles and Lyle shine as Yankees extend lead

Some familiar names are keeping New York Yankees on top in the American League East.

Graig Nettles slammed a one-out home run in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the Yankees a 5-4 victory over Seattle Mariners Wednesday night. It was the slugging third baseman's second homer of the game and moved the defending AL home-run champ into the league lead with 34.

Sparky Lyle, 12-4, gained the win for the third consecutive game as New York won its 20th game of its last 24. The Yankees lead second-place Baltimore Orioles and Boston Red Sox by four games.

The Orioles completed a three-game series sweep over California Angels; nipping Frank Tanana 4-3 to move into the tie with Boston.

Jim Norris drove in the tie-breaking run with a pinch double in the ninth inning as Cleveland Indians edged the Red Sox, 4-3. Boston and Baltimore have 75-55 records.

Kansas City increased its Western Divison lead to two and one-half games over the idle Chicago White Sox with a 5-4 win over Texas Rangers as Fred Patek drilled a tie-breaking double in the sixth inning.

The Royals are now three games ahead of Minnesota Twins, who lost 4-3 to Oakland A's, and three-and-one-half games in front of the Rangers.

Wayne Gross slammed his first home run in almost six weeks while Doc Medich and Doug Bair checked the Twins on six hits as the resurgent A's gained the win.

In the National League, Philadelphia Phillies moved five games in front of Pittsburgh Pirates in the Eastern Division, as Steve Carlton pitched an eight-hitter for his 19th victory of the season to defeat Atlanta Braves 6-1.

The Pirates, meanwhile, fell to San Francisco Giants for the 10th time in 12 meetings this year, as Darrell Evans slammed four hits, including a three-run homer, and Jim Barr pitched an eight-hitter to win 6-3.

Tom Seaver limited Montreal Expos to three hits and Joe Morgan clouted his 21st home run as Cincinnati Reds blanked the Expos, 6-0.

Despite the victory, the Reds couldn't narrow the gap between themselves and the Dodgers in the Western Division. Los Angeles blanked Chicago Cubs 5-0 as Rick Rhoden combined with two relievers for the shutout.

The first-place Dodgers are still eight and one-half games in front of the Reds.

Calgary club rallies to surprise Bates

Victoria Bates suffered a major setback Wednesday in their bid for a third straight Canadian senior men's fastball championship at Hull, Quebec.

Calgary Adanacks scored three runs in the seventh inning to edge the defending champions 3-2 in a Blue Division round-robin elimination game.

It was the first loss in three years in Canadian championship play for Bates and it left them 2-1 and with two games remaining. Bates have today off but play Nova Scotia and Quebec Friday.

The Bates games Friday will be broadcast on radio station CJVI at 6 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Nova Scotia had been considered Victoria's toughest opposition in the Blue Division but after scoring a 3-2 win over Quebec Wednesday the Nova Scotia team was upset by New Brunswick, 2-1.

Quebec was virtually eliminated from the chase for one of the two playoff berths in the division when it dropped a 4-1 decision to Prince Edward Island.

Bates jumped to a 2-0 lead in the first inning but Calgary came up with five singles in the seventh to score the three runs. Dave Ruthowsky, took the loss in his first start of the tournament. He gave up four singles and a fielders' choice before giving way to Andy Konopacki who was tagged for the game-winning hit.

Jim McMillan started Bates early rally with a single and went to third when Carl Walker doubled. The Adanacks decided to intentially walk Bob Burrows, who hit three homes runs Tuesday, but were called for an illegal pitch that brought McMillan home. They then pitched to Burrows and he hit a run-scoring single.

Whitey Haley went the distance to earn the win for Alberta.

Bates, who easily handled all but the strongest teams in the last two national tournaments, struggled past lightly regarded Prince Edward island, 1-0, and New Brunswick, 4-3, Tuesday.

And the Colonist learned Wednesday that Stan Kern didn't make the trip with the club.

Kern was reported to have practised with Bates before they left and was expected to meet the team at the airport Monday morning to fly to Hull. But Kern, known to be a less-than-avid air traveller, didn't show.

Kern, who drove to the championships in the East in previous years, was reported to be out of town and was unavailable for comment Wednesday.

Calgary leads the Blue Division with a 3-0 record while Manitoba and Ontario and the host Hull Volants are all 2-0 in Red Division and Saskatoon is 1-0.

The top two teams in each division advance to the double-knockout playoffs.

Cards trade relief pitcher

ST. LOUIS (AP) — St. Louis Cardinals announced Wednesday night the trade of right-handed relief pitcher Clay Carroll to Chicago White Sox for a player to be named later.

The 36-year-old Carroll, a veteran of 15 major league seasons, was acquired by the Cardinals last March from the White Sox in exchange for right-handed reliever Larrin LaGrow. Carroll's record in 39 games for St. Louis was 4-2, with an earned run average of 2.40.

Ramirez, Cox upset as U.S. Open starts

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (Reuter) — Raul Ramirez and Mark Cox slithered to defeat Wednesday as the United States Open tennis championships opened with heavy rain and mixed fortunes for the seeded players on view.

Ramirez, the sixth seed from Mexico, was humbled by a little-known Ecuadorian, Ricardo Yeaza, 6-3, 6-2, while Cox, the 13th seed from Britain, was ousted 7-6, 7-6 by Butch Walts, a burly, powerful American.

No. 12 seed Harold Solomon of the U.S. also had his problems before overcoming South African Bernie Mitton 3-6, 6-3, 7-5. But fourth-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina and fiery Romanian Ilie Nastase, ranked 11th, had little more than a workout.

Vilas disposed of 1965 champion Manuel Santana of Spain 6-1, 6-0, while Nastase, who won the 1972 title, cruised past South Africa's Frew McMillan without dropping a game.

In night action, 42-year-old Ken Rosewall of Australia, who last appeared at Forest Hills in 1974 and first played this tournament in 1952, easily beat Tim Gullikson of Dayton, Ohio, 6-0, 6-4.

And in a battle of 18-year-olds, John McEnroe of Douglaston, N.Y., beat Elliot Teltscher of Palos Verdes, Calif. 6-1, 6-3 in a match marred by disputes over line calls and in which McEnroe lost one point because of a "conduct penalty" imposed by the umpire.

Willem Prinsloo regained a little prestige for South Africa when he eliminated Jeff Borowiak, winner of the Canadian Open, 3-6, 7-6, 6-1.

Phil Dent, one of the most prominent Australians in the competition, breezed past American Keith Richardson 6-4, 6-4, and New Zealander Onny Parun, who had to pull out last year when injuring his back in the first game against Nastase, fared better this year, knocking out Javier Soler of Spain 6-2, 6-4.

This year it is defending champion Jimmy Connors who has the back trouble.

One doctor has been quoted as saying the 24-year-old power-house American would be foolish to play this year, the last time the tournament will be held at Forest Hills before moving to the nearby Flushing Meadow facility.

But Connors, the second seed, has said he will play anyway.

The other ailing star, top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden, is receiving treatment for a strained chest muscle. Both Wimbledon champion Borg and Connors were excused from playing Wednesday to give them more time to recover.

Capital captures Heywood crown

Capital Builders scored three runs in the first inning Wednesday night, then erupted for three more in the seventh to defeat Castle Properties 8-6 and capture the Heywood Avenue Men's Softball League playoff title.

Six Castle errors contributed to Capital's win in the fifth and deciding series game at Heywood Park, with three coming in the first inning. The winners made five errors.

Castle retaliated with two runs in each of the first two innings, as John Coccioloni and Theo Van DenBurgh tagged bases-empty homers, and hung on to a one-run lead when each club tallied in the fourth inning.

Consecutive singles by John Thompson, Barry Milne, Vic Gee and Al McDonald in the seventh iced the Capital victory.

Dave Hughes gained credit for the win, striking out two, walking none and yielding six hits. Only two of the runs he allowed were earned.

Starter John Barnes took the loss and was relieved by Lorne Bowden after the seventh-inning damage was done.

McDonald had two hits for the winners, including one RBI, while Coccionloni's pair of hits paced Castle. Barnes drove in two runs for the losers.

Bob Richdale of Remco Office Supply won the league's most valuable player trophy in presentations earlier this week. Barnes was top pitcher, while Kevin Gilbert of Century Inn led the league in hitting.

Paul Baines of Remco was the most sportsmanlike player and Marv Carver of Capital Builders won the Bud Dalziel trophy for outstanding service to the league.

Change would let cabinet hear land reserve appeals

The Social Credit government moved Tuesday to amend the Land Commission Act by allowing cabinet to consider appeals that in the past had been rejected by the commission.

Environment Minister James Nielsen told reporters the amendments would not change the basic intent of the act, which, amid much public protest, became law in 1973 under the former New Democratic Party government.

The law has as its main intent the preservation of agricultural land in B.C. through an agricultural land reserve.

The minister said that the change, one of several introduced, meant the cabinet would have the same powers as the land commission.

Nielsen said that under the current law, an appellant wishing to have the classification of his land changed must first receive the approval of the land commission to have his appeal heard by the cabinet's environmental land use committee. Such a step would be taken after the commission had already ruled on the application.

The amendments provide that within 30 days of having a request for an appeal denied by the commission, an appellant can go directly to the minister to ask that the committee hear the appeal.

Nielsen said this procedure would soothe complaints of personal conflicts, and give the appellant the satisfaction of dealing with an elected, rather than an appointed, official.

NDP environment critic Robert Skelly said the amendments undermined the appeal procedure.

"I think they're a bloody tragedy," Skelly said.

He said the new procedure would be a political route because it downgraded the importance of the commission.

"Some developers who were not getting their way appear to be getting their way now," Skelly said.

He also said the current system was widely acclaimed as one that could be free of abuse.

Other provisions contained in the land commission amendment act, 1977, call for:

- The name of the law to be changed to the Agriculture Land Commission Act. Nielsen said this was to avoid confusion with other laws dealing with land;
- Municipalities and regional boards wishing to apply to the commission for exclusion to first hold a public hearing into the matter;
- The cabinet to have the ability to impose conditions or restrictions on land released from the agricultural reserve. Nielsen said this condition was very similar to a type of land-use contract, adding that no such power existed previously to restrict use once land was removed;
- Persons holding several blocks of agricultural land to be allowed to consolidate their holdings without the expense of a legal survey by entering into a convenant with the land commission. Nielsen said surveys could cost thousands of dollars, and it was often the wish of both the committee and the land holder to have the land consolidated;

Nielsen . . . same intent

- The act to cover only agricultural land. Nielsen said the Greenbelt Act passed earlier this summer would protect the "green belt land, land bank land and park land" described in the Land Commission Act;
- The cabinet to have greater power to designate land as being protected by the reserve.

Nielsen also said the amendments would cut away some red tape existing in the act.

Cobble Hill champ

VANCOUVER — Yvonna French's open grand champion market lamb from Cobble Hill drew a bid of $1 a pound from Jackson's Meats of Vancouver at the Pacific National Exhibition on Monday.

Jackson's had paid $1.50 a pound for the 4-H reserve champion lamb from Clark Whitehead of Pitt River Lamb Club.

Woodward's Ltd. paid $5.10 a pound for the 107-pound grand champion 4-H lamb exhibited by David Croy of the Chilliwack Lamb Club to lead buyers at the PNE sale of market lambs.

The sale was considered one of the most successful on record. High price for any open lamb lot was $1.35 a pound bid by Woodward's for the pen of three lambs, champions in the 70 to 100-pound class exhibited by Hullcar Farms Ltd. of Merritt.

Malaspina staging 'open day'

The Duncan division of Malaspina College will be staging the information and registration open house for credit courses at the Village Green Hotel, Duncan, on the evening of Thursday, September 8, starting at 7:30 p.m.

Gadgetry shunned by purist

Greek—the ancient food with a timeless taste

By PHYLLIS HANES
The Christian Science Monitor

BOSTON — The simple way of life of the Greek island villagers where she was reared is reflected in the kitchen of Theonie Mark's New England home.

There's not one electrical gadget or appliance in sight. No mixer, blender, juicer, or food processor is ever used.

"I've just never needed them," Theonie said. "To me, there's nothing difficult about mixing up a cake or a batch of bread by hand. I've never needed them . . . when testing recipes for my Greek cookbook."

At first glance, there is nothing remarkably unusual about Theonie's kitchen other than its attractive decor. Greek copper pans hang above a small, black, iron, wood stove; Greek island pottery brightens the wall behind a plain, pine table. There is also a sink, stove, the usual basic modern kitchen equipment found in any kitchen — but no electric skillets, can openers, or other superfluous appliances.

Theonie, who appears on the "Greek Island Cooking" television show here, was born and brought up on the island of Rhodes where she learned to cook the way all island women learn — by watching her mother, aunts, and grandmother.

Married to an American, she lives with him and their three sons in a 200-year-old farm house in suburban Boston.

Her cookbook, Greek Island Cooking (Little Brown, $8.95), is divided into the seasons, with appropriate recipes and descriptions of the beauty of the Aegean islands and the way of life of the people.

The cookbook tells not only of dishes and procedures the Greeks have inherited from their forefathers, but also the variations introduced into Greek cooking by invaders of the islands over the centuries.

How is Greek island cooking different from other Greek cooking? Let's take green spinach pie, a familiar dish to many Americans.

Made the island way, this dish has a homemade crust rather than the thin, flaky filo dough you find when it's served in most Greek-American restaurants. Also there is no egg in the mixture of spinach and spices and cheese that makes up the filling.

Theonie believes strongly that traditional recipes shouldn't be altered, therefore she doesn't add eggs as some recipes do. Her crust is a mixture of white and whole wheat flour with yeast, which produces a breadlike dough.

In the cities on the Greek islands this dish is sent to the neighborhood oven to bake in a round, tin-lined copper pan called a tapsi. But the vegetables also can be arranged in a 9-by-12-by-2-inch pan and baked in the kitchen oven without the vegetables losing any of their flavor or color.

STUFFED SUMMER VEGETABLES (GHEMISTA)

- 3 large green peppers
- 3 12-inch zucchini
- 3 medium-sized potatoes
- 3 large, firm, red tomatoes
- 1½ cups chicken stock
- 1 cup rice
- ½ cup pine nuts
- 1/3 cup olive oil
- 1 chopped onion
- 1½ pounds ground lamb
- ½ cup chopped, flat parsley
- 1 tablespoon tomato paste
- ½ cup cold water

Salt and pepper to taste.

First prepare vegetables, each group individually. Cut off tops of peppers, remove seeds, blanch for five minutes in boiling water, remove from water and drain. Cut off zucchini stems and cut them in half crosswise. With small knife, scoop out pulp, careful not to puncture skin. Blanch in boiling water one minute, then drain. Peel potatoes and hollow an opening large enough for two tablespoons of stuffing, then blanch five minutes in boiling water and drain. Cool with other vegetables.

Slice tomato tops almost off, leaving them hinged to serve as covers. With a spoon, scoop out pulp and save.

To make stuffing heat oil in skillet over moderate heat; add onion and cook until wilted. Stir in chopped meat and cook until it is all crumbles, then add the rest of ingredients. Stir with a wooden spoon and cook over moderate heat 10 to 15 minutes or until water is absorbed, rice is half cooked, and mixtute is thick. Remove from fire and cool.

Preheat oven to 400 degrees F. Stuff vegetables loosely, using a spoon and arrange in groups in a shallow pan, stuffing side up, except for zucchini, which should lie down snugly side by side. Pour chicken stock into pan; cover vegetables loosely with aluminum foil and cook 15 minutes longer. Cool slightly and transfer to a platter. Pour over any broth and serve. Serves four to six.

CALORIE-CONSCIOUS COOKING

By Barbara Gibbons

Here's how to "process" your own skinny cheese spreads — without a crockful of unwanted calories.

Begin with nearly no-fat pot cheese (that's cottage cheese without a lot of cream calories or liquid added). Whip it up in a blender or food processor with flavor-adders like garlic, onion, pepper, mustard, Worchestershiire, Tabasco and zesty seasonings.

Serve your skinny spreads in a small brown crock, the kind left over from the fattening spreads. Lowfat pot cheese is 99 per cent fat-free (check the label!) while most processed cheese spreads are 20 per cent fat or more, and about 50 calories a tablespoon!

A food processor can make short work of spreads. It used to be that only well-heeled cooks could afford to tinker around with food processors, but there are affordable North Americans versions that do the job just as well as the fancy imports — and for far fewer dollars. A food processor's steel chopping blade can mince ingredients in a few seconds flat, then whip pot cheese into "cream cheese" almost as fast as you can turn it on and off.

Lacking a food processor, you can still make these spreads in a blender. Chop, shred or grate the solid ingredients by hand, whip the pot cheese smooth in the blender, then add the minced ingredients. Blend only till combined. (Thick mixes are more difficult to remove from a blender than from a food processor.)

GARDEN CHEESE SPREAD I

- 1 cup 99 per cent fat-free pot cheese or dry cottage cheese
- ½ teaspoon salt or garlic salt
- 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 2 radishes
- ½ small onion, peeled
- ¼ of a sweet bell pepper, seeded

In blender: Blend cheese, salt and Worcestershire smooth. Mince or chop vegetables by hand and blend into cheese.

In food processor: Chop vegetables using metal chopping blade. Add remaining ingredients and blend just until mixed. Spoon into small crock or covered refrigerator bowl. Keep chilled. Makes about one and one-third cups, under 10 calories per tablespoon.

GARDEN CHEESE SPREAD II

(Adapted from the Farberware Food Processor Recipe Guide)

- 2 cups 99 per cent fat-free pot cheese or dry cottage cheese
- ½ teaspoon dry mustard, or 1 teaspoon prepared
- ½ teaspoon salt or celery salt, to taste
- pinch of pepper
- 2 large radishes, quartered
- ½ small cucumber or zucchini, in one-inch lengths
- ½ small bell pepper, seeded
- 1 small onion, peeled and quartered
- 4 pimiento-stuffed green Spanish olives, halved

In blender: Blend cottage cheese, mustard, salt and pepper smooth. By hand mince or chop vegetables fine, then add to blender. Process only till mixed.

In food processor: Chop vegetables using steel chopping blade. Add remaining ingredients and process only until smooth. Store in small crock or covered bowl in the refrigerator. Makes about two and one-half cups, 10 calories per tablespoon.

MOCK BOURSIN

- 1 cup 99 per cent fat-free pot cheese or dry cottage cheese
- ½ teaspoon salt, or to taste
- 2 or 3 sprigs parsley
- 1 clove garlic, peeled

In blender: Beat cheese and salt smooth (will be thick). Mince parsley and garlic and blend into cheese.

In food processor: Chop garlic and parsley using steel chopping blade. Add remaining ingredients and blend smooth. Store in covered crock in refrigerator. Makes one cup, about 10 calories per tablespoon.

Heritage lingers in cake contest

TORONTO (CP) — There is a woman in Edmonton who loves to bake cases — so much that she flew to Toronto during the Canadian National Exhibition with one to enter a competition which still remains as popular as it did 99 years ago when the exhibition began.

Elsa Jenkins, who has been manager of the women's division of the CNE for 25 years, said the Edmonton woman is not unique.

She said in an interview that baking, sewing, crocheting and rug-making contests are not only popular, but are getting more so as entire families enter the fruits of their leisure-time activities.

In a corner of the Better Living Building at the CNE are hundreds of handcrafts done by hobbyists all over Canada.

"The better living concept changes somewhat each year," said Mrs. Jenkins, "but the traditional is still here."

She said that this year because of inflation, the organizers recognize that people are watching their pocketbooks more carefully than in the past and have planned the pavilion with that in mind.

"For instance, in our cooking demonstrations, the gourmet shows have gone forever. We're getting back to basics and showing the public how to stretch the dollar."

Strata policy blitzed, Saanich review likely

Saanich council's policy toward condominiums was attacked Tuesday by the president of the Greater Victoria Strata Corporations Association.

Lew Jones told the lands, planning and housing committee that the community plan indicated council policy of combining condominiums with apartment buildings, commercial and industrial properties into densely-populated enclaves, with little relief by means of parks or recreational facilities.

Although denying the charge aldermen agreed that the policy toward condominiums should be reviewed.

Jones said the policy was exemplified by condominium development near the Shelbourne-McKenzie, Shelbourne-Cedar Hill and Quadra-McKenzie intersections.

"It is a recognized fact now by most municipalities and planners that condominiums, because of population density, should be situated near open spaces," he said.

Jones described Victoria and Oak Bay as "enlightened" areas.

Saanich's stand appeared to be that such accommodation was cheap and second-class and to be used as a buffer between commercial and industrial sections and the detached single-family dwelling areas, he contended.

Ald. Ian Cass said because of the strong opposition to high-density development now prevalent in Saanich "you should take your campaign outside these walls."

Ald. Fred Severson agreed that condominiums should be located in spacious areas rather than along busy traffic arteries.

A novel approach:

Victorian picks Paris to sell book in French

Moreau

A novel written in French by a B.C. resident has just come off the presses of a Paris publishing house.

Le Commis (The Clerk), written by Dr. Gerard Moreau, chairman of the University of Victoria French department, has been published by La Pensee Universelle in Paris.

The novel is described by Moreau as the first-person narrative of a young Quebecois who leaves his native province to make his way in an English-speaking Canadian city. The city and its streets are identified by names other than the real ones, but those familiar with the city may recognize it in the novel, Moreau said.

Placed in a contemporary setting, the novel is "realistic, and very human," Moreau said.

The narrator is a stranger in his new setting, and the novel deals with the loneliness and frustrations of adapting to a new language and a new mentality.

Moreau said he submitted the book to a French publisher which had been recommended to him by a friend, and he was pleased that the book could be published in France, where the French readership is much larger than in Canada.

Moreau got his first copy of the book at the end of last week. He has not yet heard how the critics have received the novel.

Grad to be aboard

They call it "graduation" and it's all in fun. But to the children who are leaving the Fairfield Day Care Centre some after two years — it's an important occasion. Off on an imaginary cruise to higher education in this landbound boat Wednesday are (clockwise from front): Rebecca Coss, Brad Duggan, Angie Turford, Maryanne Clark, Miko Bruce. The "diplomas" they are clutching include one letter telling them how great they are and another telling teachers in the "big school" (elementary) what to expect next week.

U.S. skipper sought in 'abduction'

Fisheries official had to jump

Canadian Press

Police on both sides of the Canada-United States border were searching Wednesday for the captain of a U.S. seiner after a Canadian fisheries officer said he was abducted in an incident on Juan de Fuca Strait last week.

RCMP Sgt. Ed Kokoska said the FBI had been called in to assist in the search because Canadian efforts to locate the seiner, the Lucky Star, had failed.

Kokoska said the fishboat, although registered at Kodiak, Alaska, was believed to be somewhere in Washington state waters.

He said the captain was wanted for questioning in connection with an incident Aug. 24 when the fisheries patrol boat Laurier caught an American seiner allegedly fishing in Canadian waters off Port Renfrew, about 50 miles west of here.

Kokoska said Laurier quartermaster Butch Mayo prepared to board the seiner to place the captain under arrest and escort the vessel into port. But just prior to Mayo's boarding, the seiner and the Laurier were involved in a collision.

Fisheries officials said the collision occurred when Laurier captain Jack Goss positioned his vessel in front of the bow of the seiner to prevent it from escaping.

Some damage was done to the seiner along its port bulwarks but the Laurier was unharmed and Mayo boarded the vessel.

The fisheries spokesman said the captain of the seiner warned Mayo that once he came aboard, all he would get is a one-way trip to the U.S.

The spokesman said the seiner then hauled its nets and "sort of jogged towards the boundary."

When it crossed the border, the spokesman said Goss sent out a rubber lifeboat to retrieve Mayo.

But the seiner refused to stop when the lifeboat pulled alongside, and Mayo had to jump, while both boats were moving.

Kokoska said charges were contemplated against the captain.

Mike Entler, FBI special agent, said Tuesday in Seattle that the bureau would help the RCMP, even though no U.S. laws were broken.

Fraser murders suspect charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP said Wednesday they had charged a 23-year-old Chilliwack man with four counts of first degree murder in the July 18 shooting of four Agassiz-area teenagers on Ferry Island in the Fraser River.

Inspector Les Homes told a news conference that Walter Murray Madsen was charged in Chilliwack after being arrested Tuesday without a struggle at his home.

In Chilliwack, Madsen stood silently in provincial court as he was charged with the murder of Evert Den Hertog, 19, of Rosedale, his brother John, 16, and Clearbrook teenagers Bert Menger, 19, and Leola Guliker, 16.

The four were drinking beer in a small recreation area by the Fraser River, 70 miles east of Vancouver, when a man came out of the woods with a rifle and opened fire. Only Ed Menger, 15, escaped to alert police.

Madsen was remanded to Friday in custody and without plea to give him an opportunity to retain counsel. Observers said the accused is about six feet tall with short, light-colored hair.

Homes said police had no theories as to a motive for the shootings and said he was not aware that Madsen had any criminal record.

The search for the suspect was one of the largest in Lower Mainland history, but led to scores of dead ends despite the hundreds of tips provided to police by the public. Police said at one point they had investigated and eliminated 200 suspects.

Ed Menger told police the gunman levelled his weapon and fired a shot. Menger said he jumped up and fled, but heard more shots behind him as he ran.

When he reached the highway, he flagged down a passing car and called police from the nearest farmhouse. Police who rushed to the scene found no sign of the four other youths, but noted that their

Korean lobbyist indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal grand jury has returned a secret indictment against Tongsun Park, a central figure in the investigation of alleged South Korean influence-buying in Congress, the Washingon Post reports.

Park, a Korean-born, Washington-based businessman, fled after the investigation began last fall and was last reported to be in South Korea, which has no extradition treaty with the United States.

The Post says the sealed indictment on an unknown charge was filed last Friday in the court of U.S. District Judge John Pratt here.

A U.S. justice department spokesman declined comment on the story. Pratt told a reporter that he had received sealed grand jury indictments but that he did not know what they contained. Asked whether Park was among them, the judge said: "I know nothing about it."

Sources with the House of Representatives ethics committee said they also knew nothing about the reported indictment.

That kms to a million

British Columbia taxpayers will spend around $1 million for the right to call miles kilometres.

Highways Minister Alex Fraser told a news conference Wednesday it would cost almost $710,000 to convert B.C.'s 25,000 highway signs plus $350,000 to educate the public to the change.

The costs do not include local costs as municipal governments change their signs to metric. The taxpayer picks up that tab, too.

Of the 25,000 highway signs slated for the change, 15,000 are speed limit signs and 10,000 are distance signs. Another 8,000 signs — rail crossings, stop signs, etc., don't require conversion.

The advertising campaign will be run by the Vancocver firm of Walker, Ricks, Ehring Limited. It includes newspaper, radio and television advertising, some of which is already running, and a brochure mailed to all 900,000 households in the province.

The switch to kilometres from miles starts today with school zones first on the conversion list. It will take about three weeks to make the complete change.

Fraser said that while the new signs and limits are legal and enforceable as soon as they are posted "we feel the police will use discretion for the first little while."

In Namibia

Pretoria taking port

PRETORIA (Reuter) — The South African government announced that beginning today the Atlantic port of Walvis Bay will cease to be part of South-West Africa (Namibia) and will belong to South Africa.

A proclamation said it was expedient and desirable that Walvis Bay, the only deep-water harbor on the barren and dangerous Southwest African coast, be administered as part of South Africa's Cape province. The Cape border is 400 miles from the port.

The change of status for Walvis Bay is linked to plans to give independence to the disputed territory of South-West Africa, administered by South Africa in defiance of the United Nations which says Pretoria's rule is illegal.

The UN-backed South-West African Peoples Organization, which is fighting a limited bush war against South African rule, has demanded that Walvis Bay remain part of the territory.

Smith appears sure of two-thirds margin

Colonist Wire Services

SALISBURY — Prime Minister Ian Smith retained control of parliament in Rhodesia's general election, and when vote-counting paused late Wednesday appeared certain of the two-thirds majority he needs to negotiate a racial settlement on his own terms.

Partial results of balloting by the mostly white electorate gave Smith's Rhodesian Front party 38 of the 44 seats he needs for a two-thirds majority in the House of Assembly. Returns from rural areas, where Smith is strong, were expected today.

There are 66 seats in the house, 50 reserved for whites.

Smith's party held 38 seats before the election, which he called in an attempt to obtain the 44-seat bloc that will enable him to make constitutional changes.

Such changes would allow him to work out a power-sharing arrangement with moderates in Rhodesia's black majority and resist an Anglo-American plan that is reported to call for his ouster and disbanding of Rhodesia's white-led armed forces.

Late Wednesday, Smith reiterated his intention to seek talks with local leaders not linked to black guerrillas who since 1972 have been fighting to topple his government. None of the moderate black leaders, however, has yet agreed to meet with Smith.

Smith said he already was looking forward to the next step in his plans for the country's future — a meeting today with British Foreign Secretary David Owen and Andrew Young, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Owen and Young are reported to be carrying plans for Smith's resignation to make

Zambia 'bombed' by jets after Rhodesian clash

LUSAKA (Reuter) — Zambia said Rhodesian jet aircraft bombed Zambian territory Wednesday near the Zambian border town of Feira.

A government spokesman said the raid came after an exchange of fire between Rhodesian and Zambian troops near Feira, which is close to the borders with Rhodesia and Mozambique.

The statement came three days after President Kenneth Kaunda had publicly predicted that Zambia would come under air attack shortly.

Pages to keep jobs for now

By JIM HUME
Colonist Reporter

The revolt of the legislative pages is over and the teenage boys and girls who run errands for MLAs are back on the job until the end of the current sitting.

And nobody appears to know how far away that date is.

The house will adjourn this afternoon at least until Tuesday, but after that it's anybody's guess.

Speaker Ed Smith said the dismissal of the pages wasn't as harsh as it first appeared and that they weren't really "fired" at all.

Spokesman for the 14 pages, George Cessford, 15, agreed that there had been considerable misunderstanding on both sides.

Tuesday the pages were informed by Sergeant-at-Arms A. M. Hutchinson that their services would not be required after Wednesday's sitting.

A subsequent row in the Legislature over the way the pages were being told to go back to school led to a 50-minute meeting between Smith, the pages and Hutchinson.

Following the meeting, Cessford said he felt justice had been done, the pages assured they could continue at their posts until the house rises for its summer, fall or winter break and "it was largely a misunderstanding, I guess," he said.

The pages' revolt began Aug. 17 when, through Cessford, they complained that their heavy blue serge uniforms with high-necked collars were oppressive during a heat wave.

That protest brought them some notoriety, raised eyebrows and no relief.

When they were told to pack their bags Tuesday, they

You might be hostages, warn Inuit

FORT CHIMO, Que. (CP) — Eskimo leaders warned Quebec government employees at a meeting here Wednesday they may use "some form of hostage-taking" if the civil servants do not leave town immediately.

Leaders of the Joint Community Councils of the Ungava and Hudson Coasts hinted at the meeting that if the employees did not leave soon, they may be prevented from leaving and would, in effect, become hostages.

● Ottawa weakly backing Inuit. Page 43

"If you don't leave now, when you do want to leave, we might not let you go," the Inuit were reported to have told the employees. But they added that no force or violence would be used "under any circumstances."

The Inuit did not say how they would carry out any action against the employees without using violence, but told them in what was described as uncharacteristically strong language to "pack and get out."

The meeting was conducted in Inuktituk, with everything translated into English and some of the talk re-translated into French.

It was the first time the two sides in the dispute had met face-to-face since the Inuit cut off water to government employees more than one week ago.

Charlie Tukalug, the delegate from Great Whale River, 700 miles north of here on the Hudson Bay coast, voiced the meeting's recurrent theme.

He said the Inuit were friends with the French until the Quebec government passed its language law, a law that he said would destroy the 4,000 Inuit of the province.

The traditional Inuit politeness is "a thing of the past," said Wally Makiak, the interpreter at the meeting. "Our patience has run out."

Each of the 35 delegates took their turn at hammering the point home— "Leave the North until the language law is changed."

Raoul St. Julien, the senior Quebec government official here, unsuccessfully tried to explain that the government had the sole responsibility to order their employees home. He said he is awaiting an order from his superiors.

In other developments, the Fort Chimo community council has told the local postmistress to cease delivery of mail-order liquor.

Council chairman Johnny Watt said the action was taken to avoid a worsening of tempers through alcohol in the already tense situation.

Some Quebec employees were reported to be showing worry and strain.

Today's global doom quiz: Pick one

The world is warming to death ☐

The world is freezing to death ☐

None of the above ☐

By PAUL DE GROOT
Colonist Reporter

An increase in carbon dioxide in the air caused by industrialization is creating a "greenhouse" effect which will warm Earth, melt the polar ice caps and flood coastal cities.

The increase in cloud cover caused by industrialization will reflect back more of the sun's heat and light, cooling the planet and leading to another ice age. Coastal cities will be pushed into the ocean by massive glaciers.

TAKE your pick of the theories, but neither one of them or their many variations has a solid basis in scientific fact, according to Dr. Joseph Smagorinsky of Princeton University.

Smagorinsky, head of the Geophysical Fluid Dynamics Laboratory at Princeton, is chairman of the Joint Organizing Committee for the First GARP Global Experiment, and in case you haven't guessed already, GARP stands for Global Atmospheric Research Project.

In Victoria this week for a meeting of the JOC executive board and other FGGE officials, Smagorinsky said that climatological research was still in its infancy, since much of the raw data needed to make sound scientific conclusions simply do not exist.

THIS IS evident from the fact that proponents of both the "warmer Earth" and "cooler Earth" theories frequently use the same data, but come to opposite conclusions.

Huge areas of ocean along the equator, in particular, had been virtually untouched by large-scale scientific observation, Smagorinsky said, and weather systems, with long-term ramifications for world climate, are spawned.

There was no question that many human activities had an impact on climate, Smagorinsky said.

THE HEAT generated by cities for instance was one of the myriad "events" that had an impact on the weather. Carbon dioxide from combustion, exhaust from supersonic aircraft, fertilizers, patterns of agriculture, and efforts to seed clouds were others.

"But we still don't know much about carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, and we can't understand it until we understand the system in its natural state. How the natural system responds to these influences can only be known if we know what the natural system itself is."

THE EXPERIMENT was the largest attempt ever made to get a look at the natural system, according to Dr. Bo Doos of the World Meteorological Organization in Geneva.

Doos, as director of GARP activities, has been placed in charge of an effort which will eventually involve 145 nations, 70 of which will conduct investigations during 1979, the experimental year, while the rest will be providing access to meteorological data and other resources which exist already.

AMONG the resources which will be brought to bear are nine satellites — two American and two Russian satellites in orbits which take them across the earth's poles, plus two American, one Japanese, one European and one Russian satellite in "geostatic orbits" which exactly match the speed of the earth's rotation, thus keeping them over one point on the earth's surface.

There will be 50 ships especially engaged in the experiment work, and five air-drop tracks in which aircraft will continually drop measuring devices to record atmospheric conditions on their way back to earth.

SOME 300 balloons will record data in the upper atmosphere at an altitude of 15 kilometres, while at the other extreme, 300 Canadian-built drift buoys will gather information from the ocean surface.

Hundreds of other ships and aircraft of convenience—vessels and planes which normally travel the globe, will be taking measurements for the experiment during their routine passages as part of the data-gathering team.

The cost of this whole effort? It is virutally impossible to pin down, but Smagorinsky says it will be in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

THE AIM of the experiment is to gather that all-important data which could lead to an understanding of how our atmosphere works.

The main data-gathering periods will be January, February, May and June of 1979, two two-month periods which happen to coincide with the Asiatic monsoon.

The most intense activity would be concentrated along the equatorial zone, a vast area about which little was known, Smagorinsky said. Regional studies in other areas such as southern Asia and the Caribbean, will supplement the primary effort.

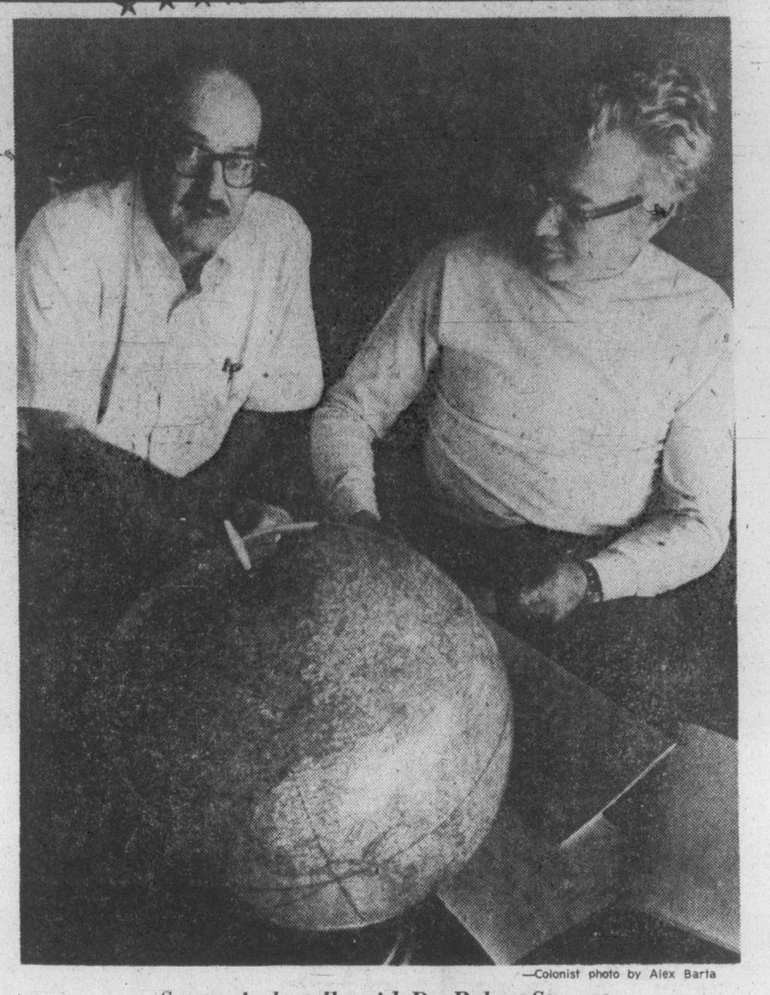

THE DATA from this massive undertaking will be first collected by Swedish and Russian processing centres. Fuller analyses will be done at a European data-processing centre in England, and an American centre at Princeton.

It would be two to three years after the experiment was completed before scientists had their first look at the organized data, and scientists would probably study experiment data for years after that, Smagorinsky said.

With an experiment as large as this one, however, results cannot be expectrd quickly.

IT WAS conceived in 1967, and took organizational shape in 1968. That was before "hard times" in the form of double-digit inflation, the energy crisis, and other afflictions had begun to slice into government and scientific budgets, but the program had remained remarkably intact, probably because governments recognize its importance, Smagorinsky said.

'Soft-core' must be out of children's reach

Barely a ripple felt on new porn law

Don't expect any book-burning today by city police as the province's new guidelines into pornography go into effect.

Chief Jack Gregory said Wednesday that his force had made the guidelines available to distributors who had agreed to co-operate.

Any subsequent charges laid in connection with the new guidelines are unlikely to be indicated by the city police, according to Gregory.

Gregory said his force would first wait for a complaint from the public at which time police obtain evidence and submit it to the prosecutor's office.

Gregory said the guidelines, which set out three categories of pornography and divided it into hard and soft varieties, "... left us with somewhat of a quandary on how to proceed."

He said the Canadian Criminal Code made no differentiation in pornography and recent court rulings had shown it was difficult to make charges stick.

Several years back, an attempt to prosecute a local theatre manager only led to publicity for the movie after the attorney-general's department instructed the prosecutor to enter a stay of proceedings.

The three categories set out by the attorney-general include:

● Category A covers material which links sex with violence, animals and children which "clearly contravenes community standards" and may by subject to prosecution.

● Category B covers hard-core pornography that does not include violence, bestiality and children. This material cannot be displayed or sold to children but may be sold from under the counter to adults.

● Category C includes soft-core pornography which cannot be made available to juveniles.

According to Saanich Inspector Ted Owen this last category likely would include publications such as Playboy, Playgirl or any other showing nudity. He said the municipality's retailers were in the process of being made aware of the new guidelines.

Gregory said there was no "blatant" problem of pornography within the city.

None of the retailers sampled thought they had had any material that would contravene the guidelines of Category A.

A spokesman for the Garden of Eden in Nootka Court doubted the other two sections applied to the store as juveniles were not allowed on the premises.

"If the government allows us to sell it, we'll sell it," said a spokesman for Tommie's News Stand, 561 Fisgard, who was unsure as to how the guidelines would apply.

A spokesman for Palace News, 616 Fort, said the positioning of magazines would be changed in the store and signs designating parts of the stands as adult literature would be posted to conform with the new guidelines on soft pornography.

Uncertain if Victoria affected

PWA fares rising 5%

Canadian Press

Pacific Western Airlines is raising fares an average of five per cent on Sunday, the result of this week's cross-country increase in fuel costs, a company spokesman said in Calgary Wednesday.

But there was no indication whether the hike would apply to PWA's Victoria-Vancouver or Victoria-Seattle flights.

Brian Johnson, a PWA public relations officer, said the increases, based only on the increase in fuel costs, will vary on the airline's runs to 45 communities in Alberta, B.C. and the Northwest Territories.

There will be no increases on some runs, and up to about seven per cent added to the fare for others, he said.

The cost of a one-way flight to Calgary from Edmonton will increase by 2.5 per cent to $30 from $29.15, while the price of a ticket to Kelowna from Edmonton will jump five per cent to $65.

Max Ward of Edmonton, president of Wardair, said the fuel price increases would not affect charter airlines fares.

"We knew about the increases a long time ago and allowed for that in our fares," he said. "It has come out just about where we anticipated."

Land-use problems 'political'

Canadian Press

The B.C. Federation of Agriculture said Wednesday it was shocked by amendments to the Land Commission Act introduced Tuesday in the Legislature.

"We don't want to see our agricultural land-use problems being resolved in the political arena," federation president Ralph Barichello said in a news release, "and that is exactly what is going to happen if the provincial cabinet is given the power to overrule decisions of the land commission."

Under the amendments introduced by Environment Minister James Nielsen, the cabinet's environmental land use committee would be able to consider appeals rejected by the commission.

In the current system, an appellant first must gain the approval of the commissioners before the matter can be taken to the cabinet, but this is being done away with.

Barichello said the move reflected an increasingly inconsistent attitude of the government toward problems of the agricultural community.

Barichello also recommended that the agricultural land reserve be taken out of the hands of the environment ministry, and given to the agriculture ministry.

It's-better-in-Victoria lure for neighbors

Canadian Press

Victoria, with the help of the provincial government, is planning to launch a tourist campaign designed to lure Vancouver and Seattle residents to the capital city, the visitors' information centre said Wednesday.

The project will involve full-page advertisements in Vancouver and Seattle newspapers, offering discounts on a wide variety of hotels, restaurants, stores and tourist attractions.

The advertising campaign begins in November in Vancouver.

The travel industry ministry will pay all costs of initial advertising and the project will be co-ordinated by the information centre.

Don Nixon, centre manager, said the promotion could attract large numbers of tourists during the off-season. The discounts would be available from Nov. 1 to Dec. 15.

The same advertising campaign is planned for early spring in Seattle after the Vancouver plan is reviewed, said Nixon, adding that any further advertising campaigns would have to be funded by the centre.

B.C. urged to stay out of Vancouver labor fuss

Organized labor in Victoria wants the provincial government — and the opposition — to stay out of the internal battle of a big Teamsters Union local in Vancouver.

Fearing legislation that they believe would interfere with union affairs, some local labor leaders are expressing displeasure with statements made by both Labor Minister Allan Williams and William King, labor minister in the former NDP government.

"There has been a lot of concern expressed about the statements of Williams and King. Our feeling is that the trade unions are quite able to look after their own affairs in a democratic way," said John Schibli, president of the Victoria Labor Council.

Labor's concern stems from statements that were made in the Legislature Monday about a battle and "trial" within Local 213 of the Teamsters.

King (Revelstoke - Slocan) wanted to know if Williams would use the authority of his office to force the Teamsters to open the closed-door trial of Jack Vlahovic to rank-and-file members of the local.

Vlahovic is accused of spending $8,000 in union funds to hire business agents without proper authority. The appointments were rescinded.

In return, Vlahovic — secretary-treasurer of the local — is taking court action against four executive members including Senator Ed Lawson, top Teamster official in Canada.

Rank-and-filers have carried on a protest outside the Teamster offices after finding they were not allowed into the trial.

AirWest strike possible by end of month—union

A Teamsters Union official said Wednesday employees of AirWest Airlines Ltd. might be in a position to strike by the middle of this month as a result of a breakdown in conciliation talks.

Business agent Wes Anderson said federal conciliation officer Jack Chapman had returned to his Winnipeg home overnight Tuesday because of the refusal of the Teamsters to take part in extended talks.

The union charged Chapman was unnecessarily prolonging the bargaining procedure by extending the original time period for the talks.

Anderson denied a radio report that the pilots and other employees had ended their prolonged "study session" and returned to the job with the airline.

"There are only about 10 who went back and they went back over the last month. There are still bout 70 out," he said.

Some three pilots were among those who returned, while another 30 pilots remained off the job, he said.

The airline has continued to operate with some difficulty since the "study session" began at the end of July in response to the firing of a co-pilot. Management personnel have flown the planes on their routes between Victoria, Vancouver, Nanaimo, Seattle and other points.

Any strike that would result now would be over the failure to come to terms on a new collective agreement. The firing of the co-pilot was a separate issue.

Anderson said Chapman, a lawyer, had been unsuccessful in bringing the sides closer. His attempt to extend talks this week brought a union boycott. Teamsters also picketed the Vancouver hotel in which he was staying.

The dispute involves some 95 employees.

Police board stubs foot patrols

Foot patrols in residential areas of the city have been rejected as impracticable by the Victoria police board.

Although agreeing to leave the matter open for further discussion, board members were of the opinion that having policemen walking beats would be a less efficient method of combatting crime than the present system of two-man cruisers.

Victoria MLA Charles Barber (NDP) and board member Phillip Fawcett are among those who have urged reintroduction of foot patrols.

Fawcett, in a letter to the board, said that in his five years on the board he has become "increasingly persuaded of the need for, and value of, community policing in Victoria."

He suggested establishing a committee with representatives from the board, police administration, constables and the community with the object of establishing an experimental community policing program in one city neighborhood.

But board chairman Mayor Michael Young said he doubted such a scheme would be practicable.
